Communications Typifies Student Life

Whether over spilt milk in the cafeteria, during bull sessions in the student lounge, or above seas of faces in the halls, Evanstonians show a continuous and lively interest in each other.

Chatting, Rushing, Jamming the Halls, Students

An ETHS student trudges from bus to school after another Illinois snowstorm.

Pulling off cumbersome boots, Pam Lazzell pays the price for dry feet.

Mrs. Margaret Ream and Dr. Stephen Storkel write out detention assignments for tardy students.

Start the Day

Seniors with precious parking permits pull in through the birdcage.

Pausing briefly before first-period class, Sarah Stanley and Margaret Swanson check homework in front of their locker.

Latecomers rush through the halls to beat the bell.

During Lunch and

Mike Driscoll's attention shifts to the clock as lunchtime approaches.

South-144 shows its appreciation of a Girls Club skit.

Quadrangle exhibits its unique talent during a publicity skit.

Chris Hondras gives a Central Council report to her homeroom while Mr. Carlyle Ehri looks on.

Sue Otto listens attentively during homeroom to a talk by her counselor.

Homeroom Students Relax After Morning Classes

Bruce Lowenthal and Bill Seyl eat their lunch slowly as they listen to the conversation around them.

Barb Marcellus and Debra Rudnick enjoy the cafeteria food.

Richard Ballard expounds to his tablemates during the last minutes of the period.

Bob Shapiro listens intently to a discussion of "The Old Man and the Sea."

Students Empty the Halls or Linger for After-School

Sunshine greets students at 3:30 as they hurry to cars or congregate in the birdcage to await rides.

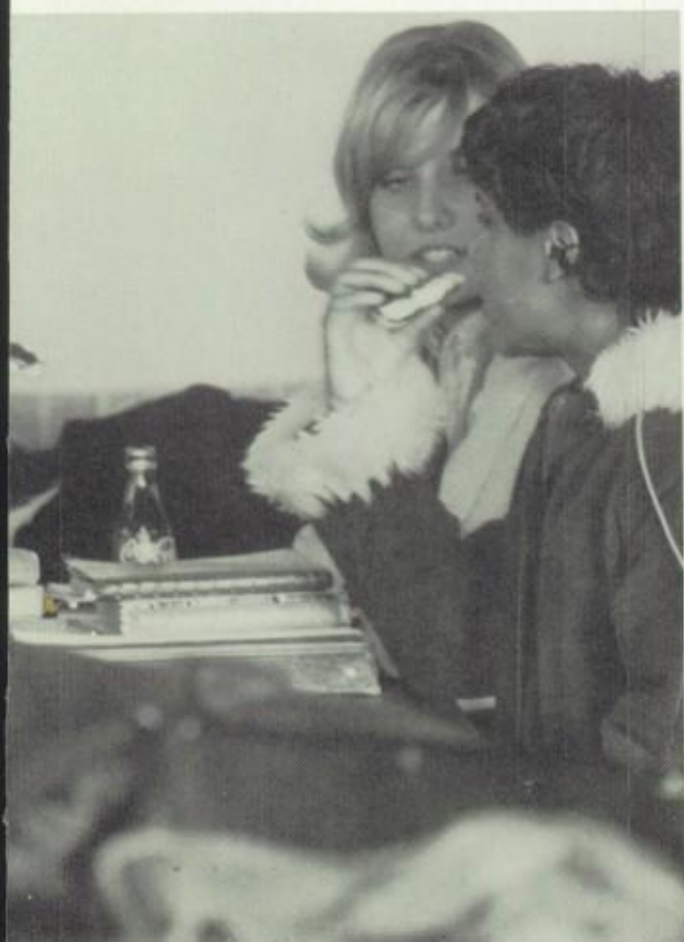

Lauren Marks, Marsha Avery, Linda Abrahamson, and Sharman Neilson chat over ice cream at the student-run snack bar in the first-floor cafeteria after school.

Greg Smith waits in the student lounge for the snow to stop.

Activities

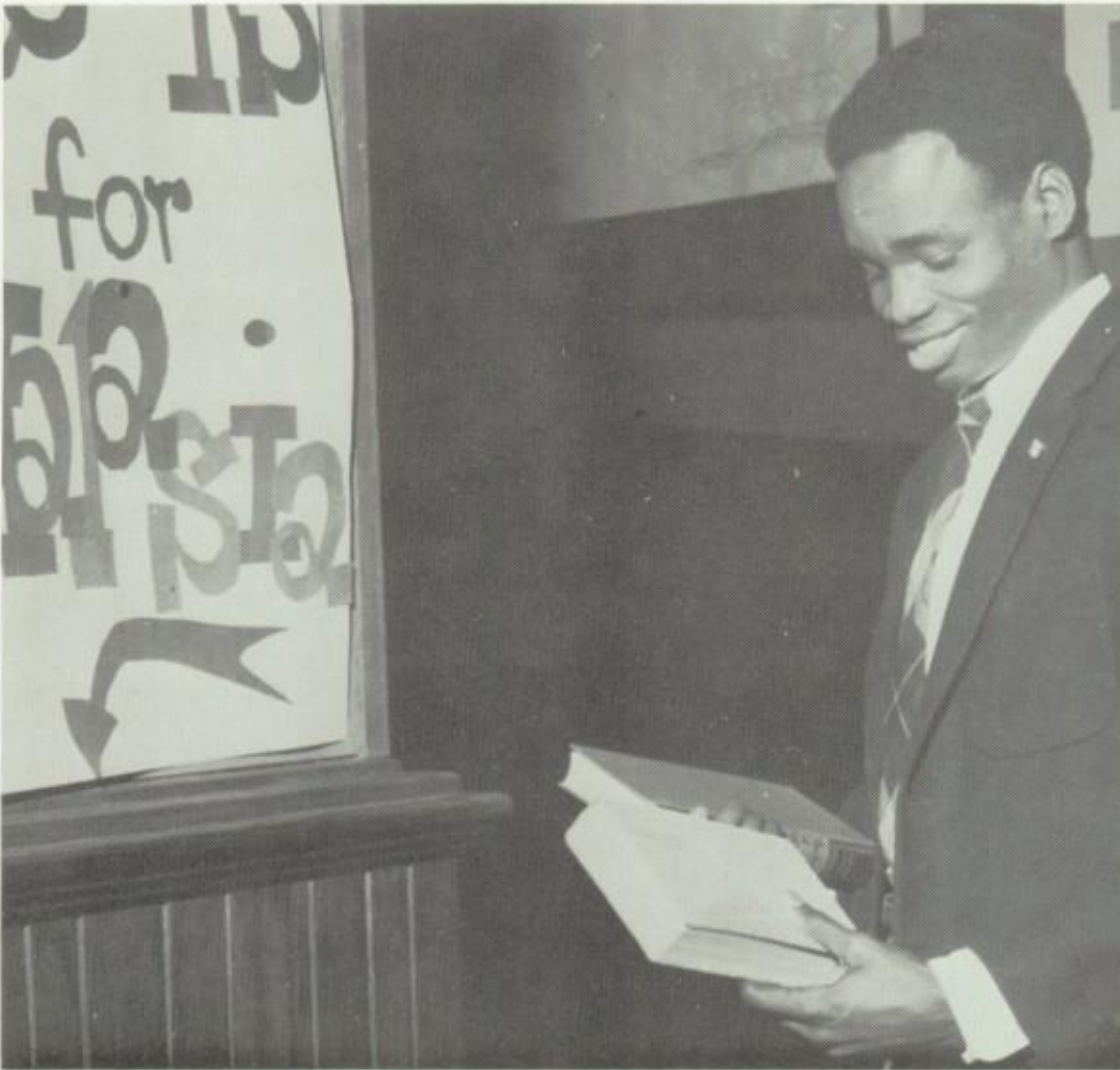

Jerry Sider stops off at his locker before going home.

The first wave of students leaves the building at the end of the school day for the Dodge Street bus while grade schoolers hurry in for a tutoring session.

Student Interest

Afro-Asian Club president Suleman Audu looks over two of the more than 200 books donated by ETHS students to the club's Books for Malaysia project, sponsored in conjunction with South Hall. The books, ranging from children's literature to classics, will be sent to start a library in a Malaysian high school.

Barbara Cohen helps a Foster Elementary School student with his English under the exchange program between ETHS and District 65 schools. Seventy-four grade school students came to ETHS twice a week for individual help with a high school tutor in any subject they needed assistance with.

Marybelle Feltenstein prepares to question Newton Minow, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, during Central Council's November self-education program moderated by Kent Peterson. Mr. Minow's speech to the student body on the television industry was followed by a student challenge board's questions on TV's role in education and politics.

Extends to Include Community, World

Congressman Donald Rumsfeld presents an American flag which flew over the Capitol to Central Council president Kent Peterson; looking on are Gene Murray, president of the Distributive Education classes which purchased the flag, and Mrs. Frances Dawson, member of the Illinois State Legislature.

In a speech before the ceremony to North Hall students, who represented the student body, Congressman

Rumsfeld reminded students of their responsibilities as citizens of a nation charged with leading the world toward freedom.

Robin Kuttner, Barbara Winokur, and Tony Grimwade fill the first bag in the annual clothing drive sponsored by East Hall in April and May. The clothing is sent to Knoxville, Tenn., processing center of the Save the Children Federation, a welfare organization to help children in the United States and overseas, where it is sorted for distribution to communities in the Appalachia region.

Participating in Expansion Plans,

Dr. Lloyd S. Michael, superintendent-principal, and Mr. Harold Nauman, history teacher, talk over the results of the $8.2 million bond issue Jan. 30. Voters approved the referendum by a 5-1 margin to finance the expansion of ETHS.

Stuart Benkover labels envelopes for a bond issue mailing urging citizens to support the schools.

Will Bogaty describes what the ETHS of 1967, expanded to accommodate 6,000 students, will be like to a homeroom audience.

Students Look to the Future of ETHS

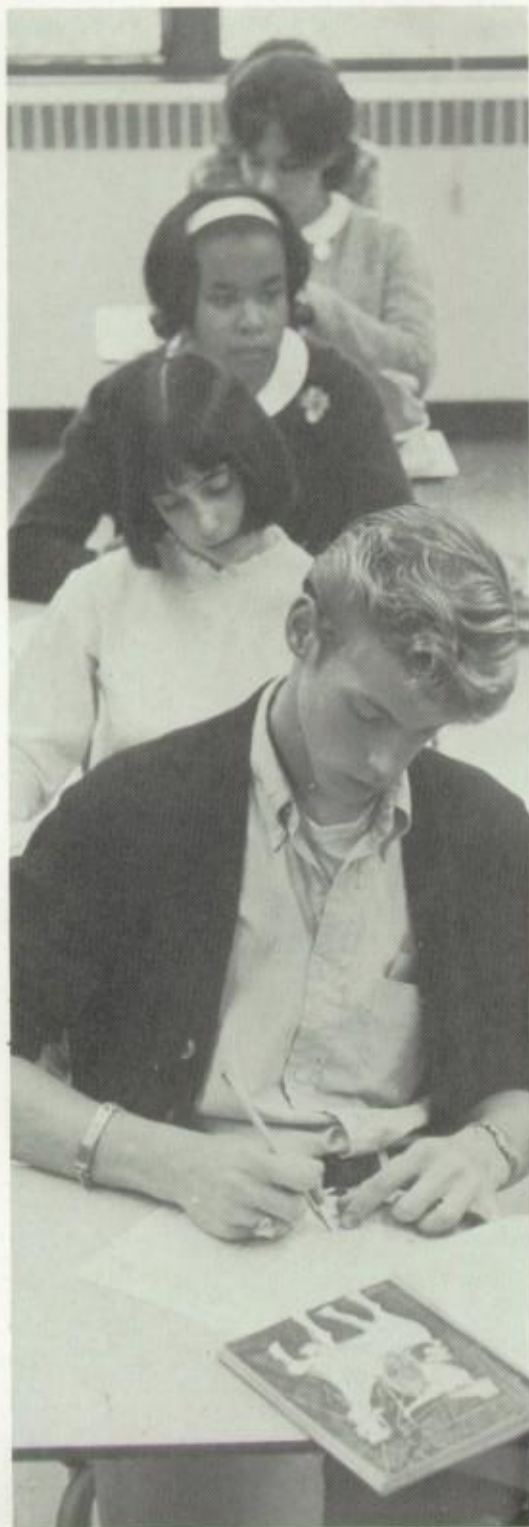

Members of the Central Council student building committee, Mike Babbitt, Kent Peterson, Cade Denison, Will Bogaty, and Stuart Bentkover, look over a model of the expanded ETHS which will be completed in 1967.

Transformation of ETHS into four semi-independent schools will be effected through the addition of three-story wings to each of the four halls, as well as major additions to girls physical education and technical arts facilities and remodeling in the current building.

Each school will house its own cafeteria, library resources center, student activities space, classrooms and laboratories. The four schools will share physical education, technical arts, and fine arts facilities, space for classes of a highly specialized nature, and the main library.

Live Up to Special Excellence

The school's purpose has always been to provide high quality education that will stimulate and extend each student's ability to express and live up to the special excellence that is in him.

No time in history has afforded greater challenge to one's talent and dedication. There is great opportunity for you to dedicate your work, your thoughts, and your dreams to building a good life and a better world.

Administration Guides Expansion Program

Planning the expansion of ETHS into a high school of 6,000 students in ten years as well as carrying out their regular duties of keeping the school operating occupied the administration this year.

Hall principals and other officials were active in drawing up plans for the construction of additions to the building and in planning the transition from present operations to the development of four semi-independent schools under one roof.

Mr. Robert Bowers and Mr. Woodrow Zaros replaced Mr. Edgar Leach as assistant principal this year, while Dr. Harold Patterson succeeded Mr. Bowers as principal of North Hall. Assistant principals were added to the administration of each hall for the first time: Mr. Glenn Eigenbrodt, East Hall; Mr. Charles Thomas, North Hall; Mr. Charles Ruch, South Hall; and Mr. Robert Elliott, West Hall.

Homeroom directors included, for East Hall: Mr. James Slagle, 104; Mr. Glenn Eigenbrodt, 124; Mr. Leo Samuelson, 224; Mr. Norval Henn, 204; in North Hall: Mr. Charles Thomas, 124; Mr. Murney Lazier, 104; Mr. Herbert Sauer, 224; Mr. Donald Raffetto, 204.

South Hall homeroom directors were Mr. David Cameron, 144; Mr. Walter Satterthwaite, 164; Mr. Robert Trevarthen, 264; and Mr. Carlyle Ehri, 244; West Hall homeroom directors included Mr. Ralph Potter, 164; Mr. Henry Bischoff, 144; Mr. Robert Elliott, 244; and Mr. Guenther Kolb, 264.

Threads of conversation catch in slamming locker doors as students react to the jarring clang of the bells at 8:10. Girls yank the covers off their typewriters amid discussion of ribbons and rolls. Coils of soldered silver tumble from the stacks of art lockers and are transformed into heavy sculpture.

Chemistry keys open drawers crammed with beakers and crucibles and also an understanding of the mysteries of science. Muted trumpets wait to be polished and played. The building holds its breath in a fractional moment of a sigh as homework is returned and spectacles shined in readiness for first period.

Diversified English Courses

The sea became life, a billboard became God, as words became more than words and English students learned to dig deeper than the printed page. Once again students struggled to comprehend the difference between a gerund and a participle. Compositions were written, corrected, and rewritten as students tried to avoid the deadly no-excuse spelling words. Seniors experimented in different methods of composition while freshmen and sophomores were taught the basic elements of style and grammar. Juniors encountered the research paper.

Special English courses provided for those with special needs or interests. Basic English helped students to achieve proficiency in language. Journalism, creative writing, and composition classes introduced students to the techniques of more specialized forms of writing. CL English gave seniors with a special aptitude for English the chance to gain college credit while still in high school.

Social Studies Highlights Men, Ideas

Ranging from history of early civilization to European History to modern American Problems, the Social Studies Department offered an extensive variety of courses to suit the individual interests of each student. To give the students a feeling of the unity of history, classes emphasized the cultural, political, and economic aspects of ancient and modern societies.

Underclassmen followed the complex development of culture and society from the ancient lands of the Orient to the present European countries.

The Social Studies Department made many innovations in teaching and organization of classes. Cooperative teaching between departments allowed teachers from other areas to speak to history classes in appropriate, related subjects, giving the student a more complete understanding of history.

Social Studies

Mr. Alan Mumbrue lectures to his United States History class on the colonization of the American continent. U.S. History, taken by all students in either their junior or senior year, is a comprehensive course covering the development of the United States from the first settlers to the present time. All students, as part of this course, must pass a state-required constitution test on the U.S.

and Illinois constitutions and the procedure for displaying the flag. U.S. History is available to seniors as a college level program; a student who passes the advanced placement test in May receives college credit. This year U.S. History CL was one of three courses organized to provide a maximum amount of independent study through the use of library carrels.

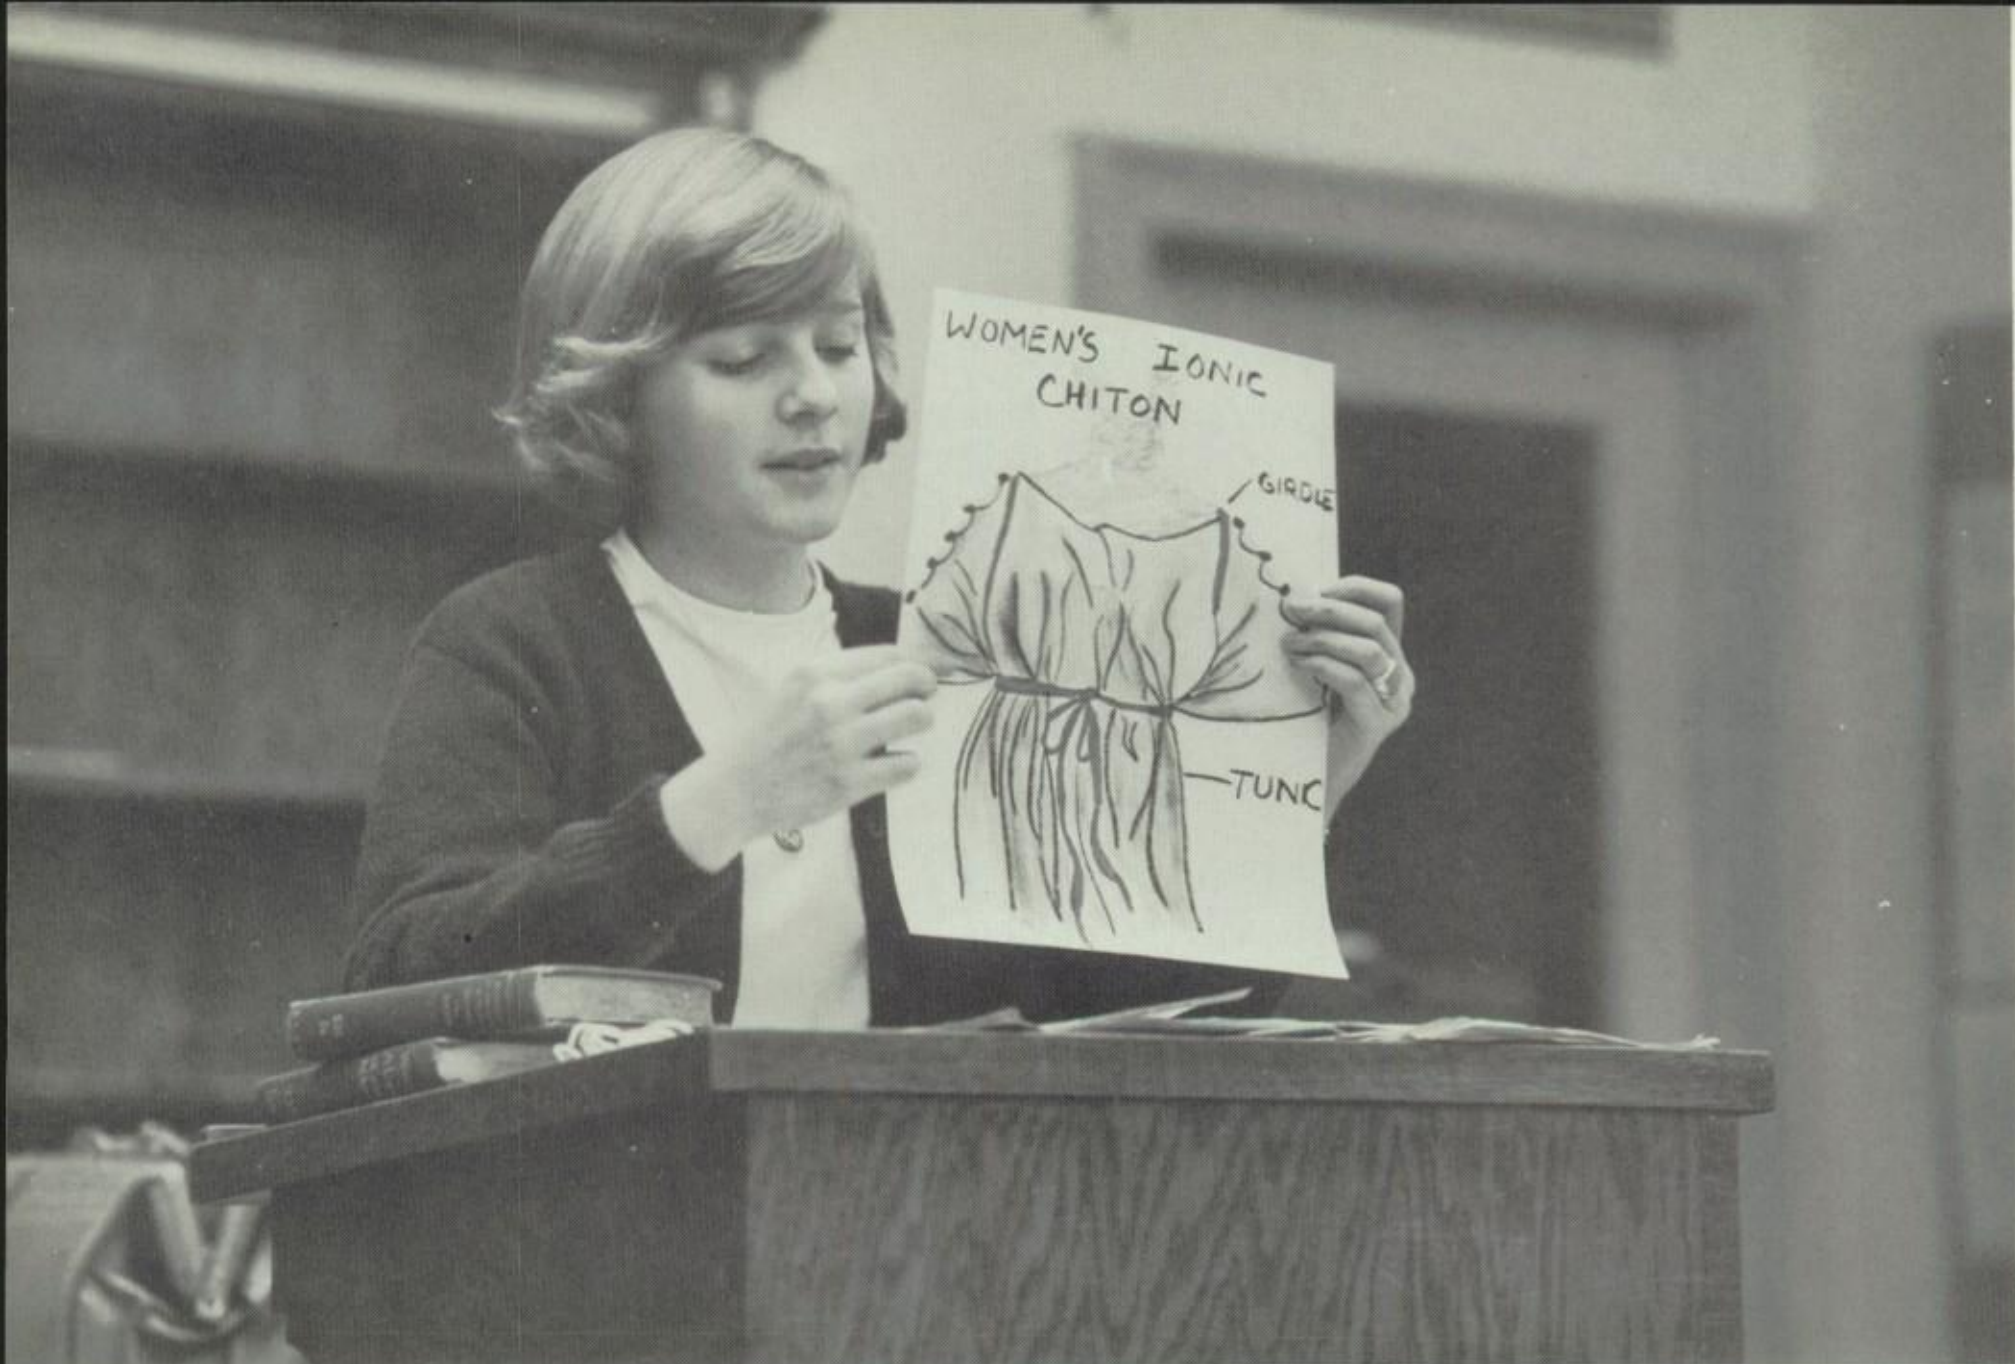

Classes Interpret Politics, Logic

Mrs. Gertrude Finley supplements an American Problems lecture with pictures on the overhead projector. American Problems, a fourth year social studies course, is an introduction to various social sciences. Students learn to apply the ancient discipline of the mind to modern problems. After several months spent on logic, students use the technique in the study of economics, social problems, political science, and ethics. The alternative for a four-year social studies sequence, European History, examines the progressive development of Western civilization. Investigation of the arts, economy, and political structure of various nations enable the student to capture the atmosphere of each historic era.

Combined Studies Emphasizes Leadership

Through the combination of English and history the Combined Studies Department offered its students a comprehensive sequence in the humanities. The department's program this year included units on critical thought and logic, college tactics, and an introduction to cultural anthropology in conjunction with creative and expository writing and personal literary interpretation.

The values of independent research and open discussion were emphasized; students learned to constructively criticize the work of both themselves and others. Oral and written reports allowed students to share their knowledge of a specific area with other class members. Students thus encouraged to think and work independently developed a self-sufficiency and capacity for leadership.

Mike Leonard listens to a lecture on "Silas Marner."

As Keith Taylor looks on, Prudi Herber answers a question posed by Mr. Earle Carlson in 2 Combined Studies.

Language Classes Emphasize Culture

The shifting patterns of world power found a reflection in the ETHS language curriculum. In recent years the Foreign Language Department has expanded its modern language program to include Russian, English for Foreign Students, Japanese, and Italian, as well as the more traditional French, Spanish, and German. This year the department recognized the increasing importance of Asia with the Summer Institute of Far Eastern Studies, which led to a school-year course in Chinese.

In all languages there was emphasis on the culture and thought behind the spoken words. Classical life and literature were explored by four years of Latin students. First year Latin classes studied Roman life and customs; more advanced classes became familiar with the lives and works of Caesar, Cicero, Vergil, and Ovid.

Throughout the department, much use was made of tapes, films, and other teaching aids. In several French classes, films of dialogs supplemented the usual memorization and translation.

Elaine Tanzman listens to the 3 French lecture during Mr. Roland DuBosq's ninth period class.

Mr. Joseph Cha teaches an advanced Chinese class. Many of these students began the study of Chinese last summer in the Institute for Far Eastern Studies. The institute, financed by an $86,000 grant from the Carnegie Corporation, brought students from all over the Chicago area to ETHS to study either Japanese or Chinese for four hours each morning. Two days of the week the students remained at ETHS for afternoon sessions on Asian history and culture. Under the leadership of Mr. Thomas Sharp, director, the institute was designed to bring students into contact with the major languages and ideas of the Far East. As a continuation of the program, the ETHS Foreign Language Department added Chinese to course offerings this year. Plans are being made for a second session of the institute in 1965.

Science Students Observe,

Bill Baron gazes through a microscope at the life in a drop of pond water in Mr. Edward Mickey's honors biology class.

Whether dissecting a frog, studying the behavior of light, or observing a chemical reaction, ETHS science students worked toward a fuller understanding of the universe. Through meticulous observation, recording of data, and discussion of experimental results, student scientists began to see the orderly nature of life, energy, and matter.

The ETHS Science Department offered diverse approaches to each of the three major science areas. Depending on their sequence, biology students concentrated on the developmental evolution, the ecology, or the chemical makeup of living organisms.

While regular chemistry students worked to memorize facts and formulas, CHEMS chemistry classes wrestled with intricate chemical equations, and CBA classes attempted to understand the complex electro-chemical nature of matter. In the physical sciences, the emphasis was on energy in all its forms.

Department Adds New Calculus Course

The ETHS mathematics curriculum was designed to provide not only for the needs of the academically advanced student but also for the needs of those who wanted math for everyday use, for the sake of a complete education or for pure enjoyment. To achieve this aim, the Mathematics Department offered multi-level courses ranging from basic mathematics to college-level algebra. There was a subject and level to fit every student regardless of his skills or interest.

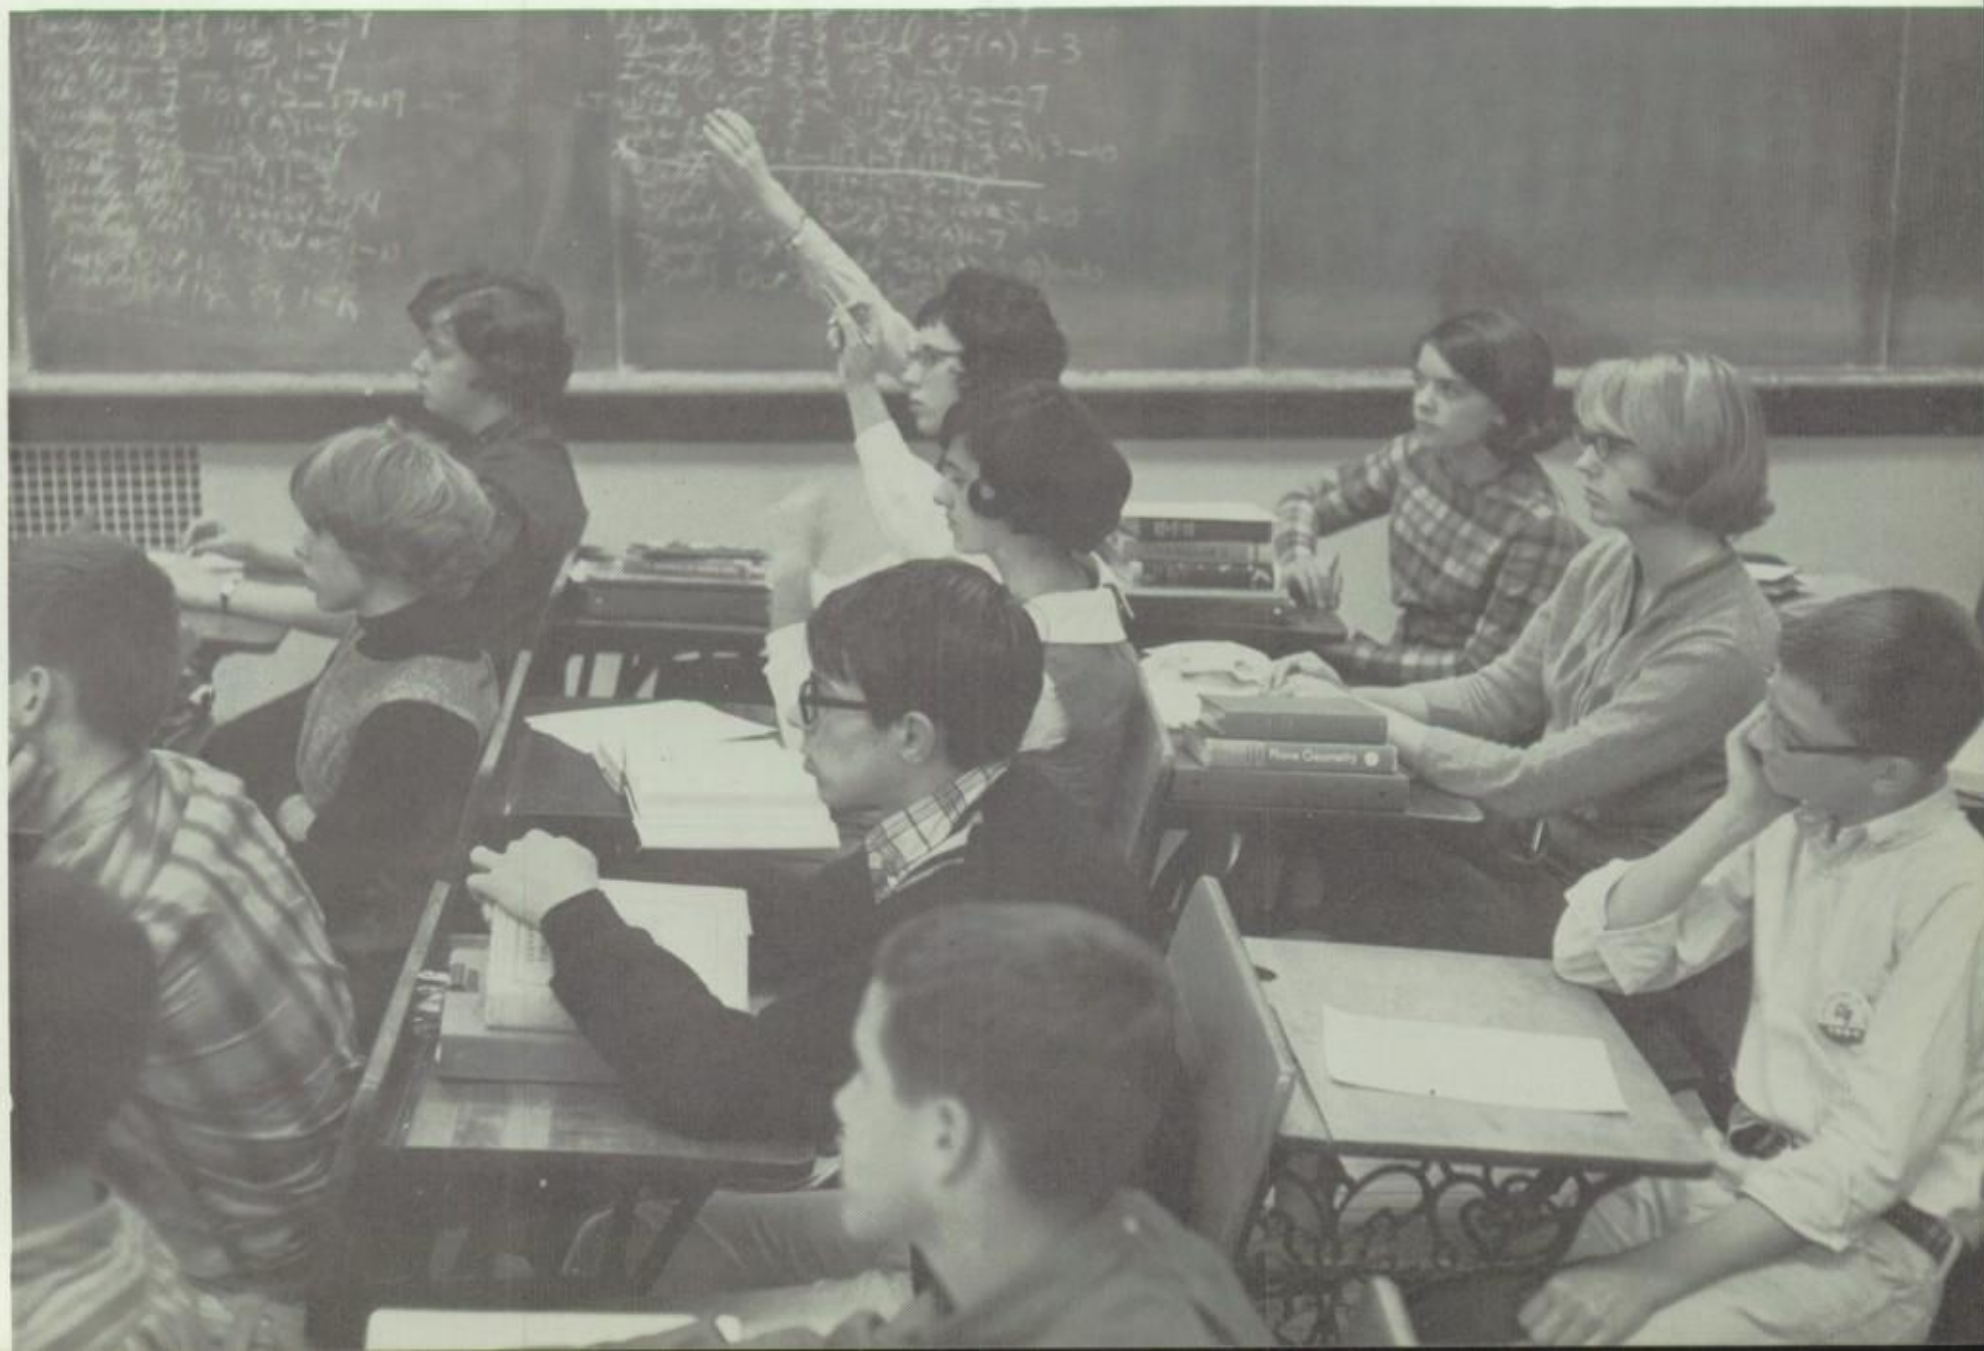

In past years the department had added a programmed course in general mathematics and modernized its courses in Senior Math and 1 Algebra. This year the department added an improved course in third-year algebra and a new course in calculus.

Andrea Stevens awaits directions on a number line problem she is about to solve in Mrs. Helen Smith's 1 Algebra H class.

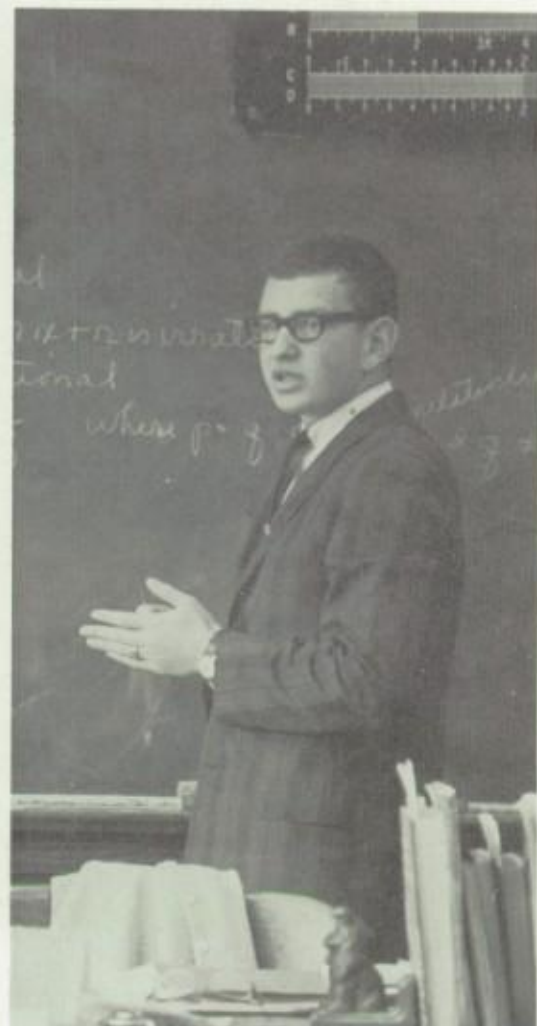

Raissa Steinman steps back for a better look at a geometric construction. Plane geometry classes learned how to construct and use parallel lines, polygons, angles, and other geometric forms. Students also studied the logical processes of formal geometric proofs.

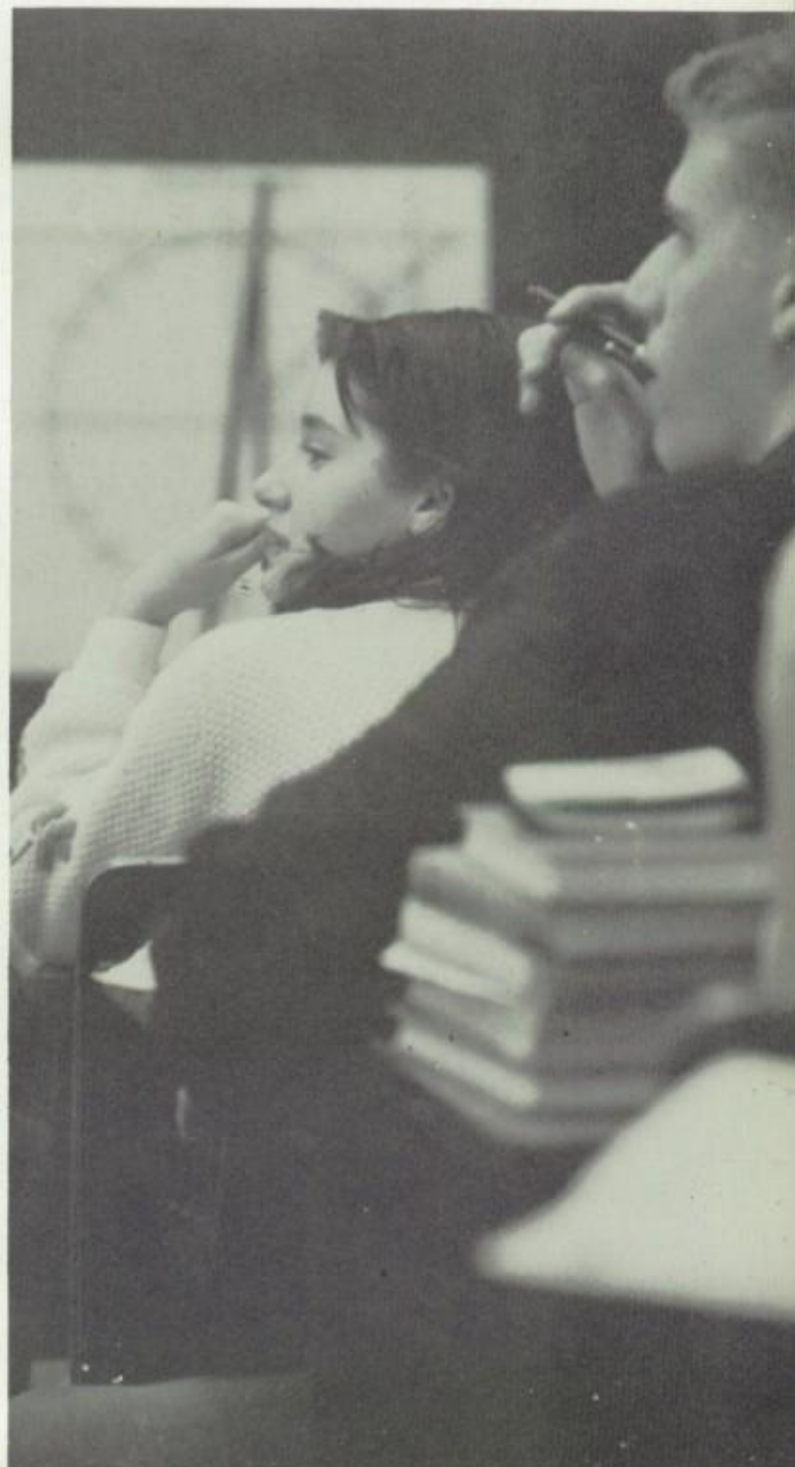

In 1 Algebra H Jeff Weinberg hears advice on a signed number problem.

Gail Abrahamson and Alan Blatt view Mr. Raymond Venn's explanation of logarithms of angle functions.

Boys Grow Fit in Physical Education

Badminton, basketball, bowling, tennis, gymnastics, swimming, flycasting, football: all were a part of the Boys Physical Education Department's efforts to ensure the physical fitness and coordination of Evanston boys.

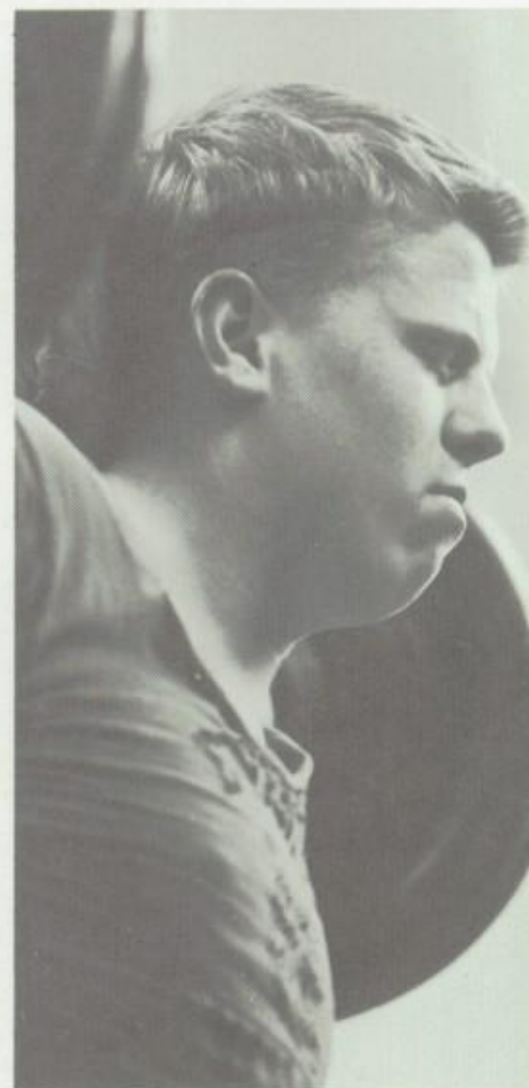

Students ran and jumped through track and field practice, toughened themselves with pushups and knee-bends in calisthenics, and then found unfamiliar muscles in gymnastics and weightlifting. More relaxed activities included bowling, flycasting, and badminton; football, soccer, basketball, handball, and squash added to the general activity. A unique feature of the department's program was co-ed volleyball for seniors.

Art Classes Encourage Creative Work

With courses from History of Art to General Crafts, the Art Department offered the opportunity for personal expression to both the career-serious artist and the curious dabbler.

Basic techniques and styles of drawing, painting, and composition introduced in 1 Art flowered with the hooked rugs of Three-Dimensional Design and the silver-ceramic jewelry of Craft Design. The work of Photography and Two-Dimensional Design classes contributed to school publications and publicity.

Students were encouraged to work creatively within the boundaries of disciplined expression and taste, in order that their art might be both a communication and a pleasure.

In the Speech Arts Department the accent this year was on people. Speech activities were designed both to reach a larger group and to help develop individuals.

The Snyder Speech sweepstakes was for the first time open to all students. Three of the four events, sportscasting, campaign speaking, and humorous speaking, were individual performances.

The Performing Arts Festival brought acting, music, and dance together to help each performer develop his talents. A highlight of the year was an acting clinic with Miss Alvina Krause, former drama professor at Northwestern, open to students who presented brief scenes from plays.

Why all the stress on individuality? The Speech Arts Department, realizing that there was more than one side to most students, tried to provide an opportunity for individual artistic expression.

The silver voice of a soprano against a dark murmur of tenor and bass; the glittering tone of a trumpet: The ETHS Music Department added the excitement of sound to the school. The marching band increased student fervor at games and assemblies; the Concert Band, Orchestra, ETHS Choir, and other groups stirred listeners with their interpretations of great music. Special performances of the music of many nations during Language Career Month gave language students at the beauties of their chosen tongue.

In lullabies, carols, and thunderous "glorias," the annual four-performance Christmas Festival brought that season to Evanston. Later in the year, other performances maintained the same attention to energetic and skillful performance.

Concert performance was not the only activity of the Music Department, however; such classes as Music Appreciation and Harmony taught students something of the composer's skill.

Industrial Arts Prepares

Whether they were college-bound headed for a technical job, or simply interested in a hobby, students in the Industrial Arts Department found its courses useful. Students developed skills in six major technical fields, including graphic arts, auto mechanics, mechanical drawing, electricity, woodworking, and metalworking.

For some, work in the technical arts prepared them for jobs after graduation. For those who were college-bound, courses such as mechanical drawing, and electricity taught preliminary engineering skills which would be useful in their university work. For students interested in a technical hobby, there was the opportunity to pursue their interest with the help and supervision of experienced teachers.

Home Economics

The Home Economics Department, with courses in cooking, sewing, and child care, was a training ground for future homemakers. Cooking classes learned not only the basic kitchen skills but also nutrition and budget meal planning. The products of their experience were used at Home Ec teas throughout the year.

Students in sewing classes studied the selection of fabrics, colors, and pattern styles, and the mechanics of fitting and finishing clothing. The outfits they made were shown at the department's annual fashion show.

One of the most rewarding courses in the department was Child Development and Care. Classes of junior and senior girls gained practical experience in the care of children in the nursery on the school grounds, supplemented by classroom studies of the physical, mental, and psychological aspects of a child's growth.

Students Gain Work Experience in DE, DO

Through the Distributive Education and Diversified Occupations programs, Evanston upperclassmen were given the opportunity to gain experience in their chosen field of work while continuing their high school studies. DE and DO students took academic courses in the morning, then left school at noon to work at jobs in one of the many trade, industrial, or business occupations sponsored by the program.

Library Checkout Utilizes IBM

Strange machines, strange noises, new procedures, and a new efficiency: IBM came to the ETHS library this year.

Evanston became the first high school in the United States to install an IBM library checkout system. Utilizing the new IBM-punched ID cards, the machine recorded a book borrower's ID number and other vital statistics plus the title, author, call number and due date of the book. This information was cabled instantaneously to the IBM office, where it was machine sorted and filed for future reference. The clerical work which formerly occupied a great deal of the librarians' time was completely eliminated.

Conferences Keynote Demonstration Center

Processions of people toured Evanston this year to observe the high school's facilities for the teaching of gifted students. For the second year ETHS functioned as one of 25 Illinois Demonstration Centers. Financed by state appropriation, the centers were designed to "give examples of the practical application of the new methods of teaching students of above-average ability." Three special conferences in January and February highlighted the Evanston center's program.

Driver Education Teaches Auto Safety

In the classroom, in Drivo-trainers, and in specially equipped cars, the Driver Education Department worked to teach students the safe use of the automobile. A nine-week classroom phase taught students the Illinois highway laws and courtesies of the road.

In Drivo-trainers students drove through filmed traffic situations.

Guidance

With patient aid and expert advice, members of the Guidance Department helped Evanston students plan for high school and beyond. Beginning early in the freshman year with the first tentative plans for the four years of high school, the counselors worked continually to fit the student's high school experiences to the present and future aims.

Guidance counselors were responsible for the administration of the standardized tests which are used by the school as an indication of a student's abilities and achievements. They also conducted surveys on the effectiveness of school programs and guidance procedures.

Although much of the department's work was concerned with the activities of the student while in high school, counselors also helped to direct non-school activities.

Students Aided Through Special Services

The Special Services Department contributed many unique features to the curriculum and operation of ETHS. The faculty worked with programs in speech correction and with students who had sight or hearing difficulties.

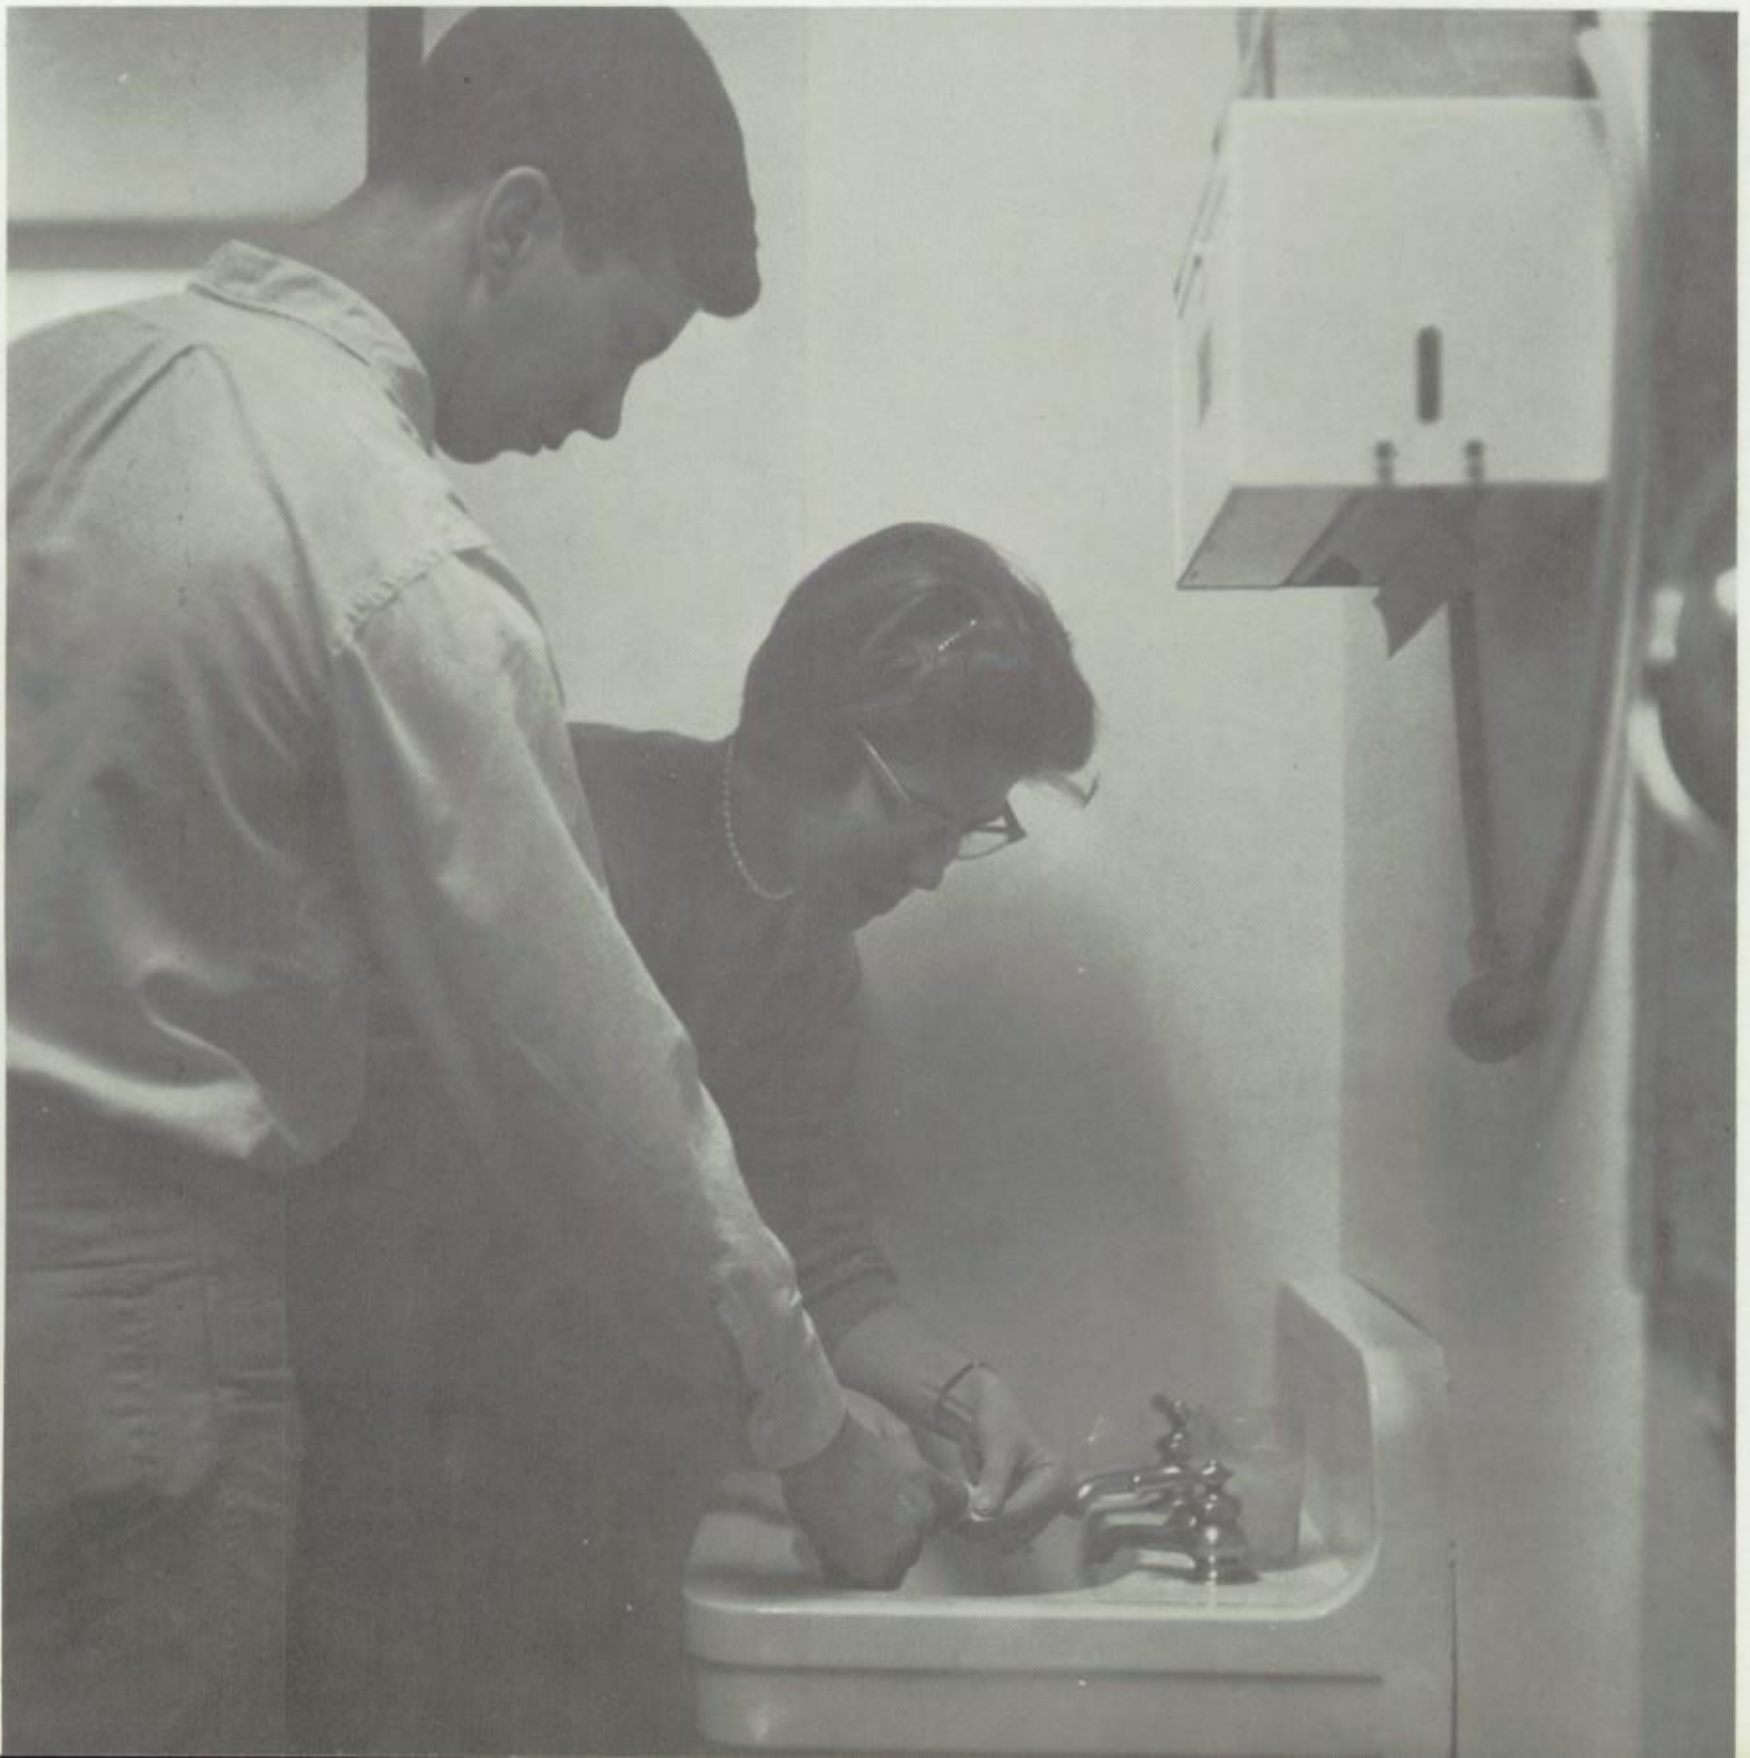

Special education teachers, school social workers, and home teachers contributed to the school's role in doing the most it could for all students. Health Service nurses watched over the physical welfare of the student body.

Organizations

Central Council Brings Minow, Others

Central Council officers: Mark Mendel, vice-president; Kent Peterson, president; Thann Moy, secretary; Joel Marks, treasurer.

Central Council, led by President Kent Peterson, continued and expanded last year's Self-Education and tutoring programs as its major projects for the year.

CC's Self-Education program brought such prominent men as Newton Minow, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission to speak at the high school. Increasing the "self" in the program, open challenge board sessions after the speeches allowed students to directly question the speaker.

The student Tutoring Committee of CC continued to bring able students to the aid of those in academic difficulty. Despite a chronic shortage of tutors, the committee was generally successful in its task of supplying needed academic help. An outgrowth of student tutoring, a grade-school tutoring and exchange program, enabled Evanston students to help elementary school children with their academic work.

Listening to a speaker at one of their weekly meetings are CC members Will Bogaty, Josh Hoffman, Jeff Allen, Steve Saleson, Roger Keats, Jim Schnitz, Cade Denison, Mark Mendel, Kent Peterson, Thann Moy, Joel Marks, Joel Helper, Eric Durant, Alan Gross, Joel Poholsky, Vertine Gibson, Jim Parks, and Pete Kenyon.

East Hall

The promotion of student participation and spirit through creative activity was the goal of East Hall organizations. East Hall Quadrangle presented a home-made satire on "Tom Jones" and also invented original skits to publicize Quadrangle activities. Quadrangle created a Taj Mahal booth at the Girls Club carnival and gave the winter dance, "Undertow," in cooperation with Girls Club.

East Hall Girls Club emphasized participation with such projects as Santa's Workshop. Its contributions to school spirit included being in charge of the pom-pom section, a dessert for cheer and pom-pom sections in the spring, and running Bow Day.

Creating sundaes at the East Hall Girls Club dessert can be difficult at times.

Organizations

The word in North Hall this year was "new." Activities of North Hall Quadrangle, Girls Club and Council were all characterized by innovation. North Hall Quadrangle showed "Twentieth Century" films during homeroom periods. "Wonder Warthog, Champion of Student Rights," was a North Hall original. Quadrangle made and sold loyalty ribbons before basketball games and helped to support a foreign school. It also produced the "walk the plank" booth at Girls Club Carnival.

Girls Club sponsored "Discotheque," the fall turnabout. It was in charge of the Personality of the Month bulletin board and active in cheer section, as well as sponsoring an ice cream social in the spring.

School Spirit

Exhibitions of vitality and courage plus Wonder Warthog appeared often in South Hall Quadrangle skits designed to supercharge school spirit. South Hall Quadrangle members were active in all aspects of Quadrangle activities; they served as hall guards, shouted in cheer section, and worked to increase student enthusiasm.

Cackling witches, gypsy fortune tellers, and painted pumpkins provided a Halloween atmosphere for the fall Girls Club Carnival, "Eek," organized under the supervision of South Hall Girls Club. Club members sponsored an ice cream social, "Never on Sundae." Many members served as T-189 and lobby tea hostesses.

"Never on Sundae" is enjoyed by South Hall girls at an annual Girls Club dessert.

Organizations in West Hall

Grade C eggs were the favored missiles for the bombardment of an unfortunate student at West Hall Quadrangle's booth in the Girls Club Carnival. Quadrangle members also assisted in the distribution of loyalty ribbons; through the sale of such ribbons it raised funds to support the construction of a school in Kentucky.

West Hall Girls Club was likewise active in its skate-board booth at Girls Club Carnival. The club sponsored the Daddy-Daughter-Dinner-Dance at which fathers and daughters were both entertainment and audience. It also helped organize the annual inter-school dinner with Waukegan.

Students with Foreign Cultures

Art, architecture, customs, and cuisine: the ETHS language clubs helped students become acquainted with the cultures of Europe, Latin America, and Asia. Designed for those whose interest in a foreign language went beyond the classroom, language clubs featured movies, lectures, field trips, and parties. Films and speakers provided information on the land, the people, the arts and the customs of other lands. Parties and field trips introduced students to specific cultural activities and gave them additional practice in the social use of their adopted tongue.

In November, for the first time in more than ten years, the language clubs participated in a joint foreign language banquet. The more than 300 students and teachers who attended represented languages ranging from classical Greek to modern Japanese.

Service Clubs Enjoy Common Goals

To serve the school and the community; to acquire and use new knowledge and skills for the benefit of self and others: these were the common purposes which directed the activities of the many ETHS service clubs.

Though some were principally school oriented, such as Library Club and Cheerleaders, and others were connected more directly with the outside world, such as Volunteer Bureau and Junior Red Cross, all provided opportunities for students to give of themselves for the greater good of all.

Aquettes Present Aqua-Vette

The activities of Aquettes, the girls swimming honors groups, centered around the annual spring water show. Beginning in the fall, Aquettes members held weekly meetings at which they practiced the difficult and graceful art of water ballet.

Under the supervision of Mrs. Ann Stevens and Miss Margaret Snaveley the girls worked from early October to December to perfect their general water ballet skills. From January to April they applied these skills in the development of their acts for "Aqua-vette," presented April 30-May 1 in the natatorium.

Based on a newspaper theme, "Aqua-vette" included an opening act entitled "Headlines," takeoffs on the society, financial, and world news sections of a typical newspaper, and an "obit" act performed entirely under water.

Cosmopolitan, Debate Stress Communication

Through educational meetings and social events the Cosmopolitan Club helped to orient foreign students to American life and customs. Important events in the club's calendar included a Christmas party, to which many members wore the traditional costumes of their native countries; a bowling tournament, which gave many members their first introduction to this popular social sport; and several meetings at which talks and movies on the U.S. and other countries were featured.

A practical extension of the Speech Arts Department, the debate and forensics program helped to make students articulate and mentally alert through experience in argumentation, public speaking, and other forms of oral presentations.

Small Clubs Mirror Student Interests

Astronomy Club members Wesley Ward and Bob Daly assist Ira Weiner in locating the image on a telescope at a club meeting.

Just for fun--or for information, education, or appreciation--the ETHS small clubs reflected student interests and enthusiasms. Music, mathematics, card games, and computers were all parts of the expanding worlds of ETHS students.

Musical interest and talent found extracurricular expression in Folksinging and Musicians Clubs. Folksinging Club members sang, played, and listened to folk music; thirteenth-century English chants, eighteenth-century American ballads, and twentieth-century protest songs all received new interpretation and new appreciation. Musicians Club members enjoyed the best of many kinds of music. The club's after-school programs included performances by a string quartet and a group of ETHS student folksingers, and group singing of rounds and canons.

Several areas of math and science captured the imagination of Evanston students. Math-Science Club stimulated curiosity about subjects from anthropology to atomic theory. Members of Astronomy Club studied recent developments and discoveries concerning space and the stars. Computer Club members learned computer theory and operational techniques. Radio Club explored both the principles of radio and the building and maintenance of a radio set.

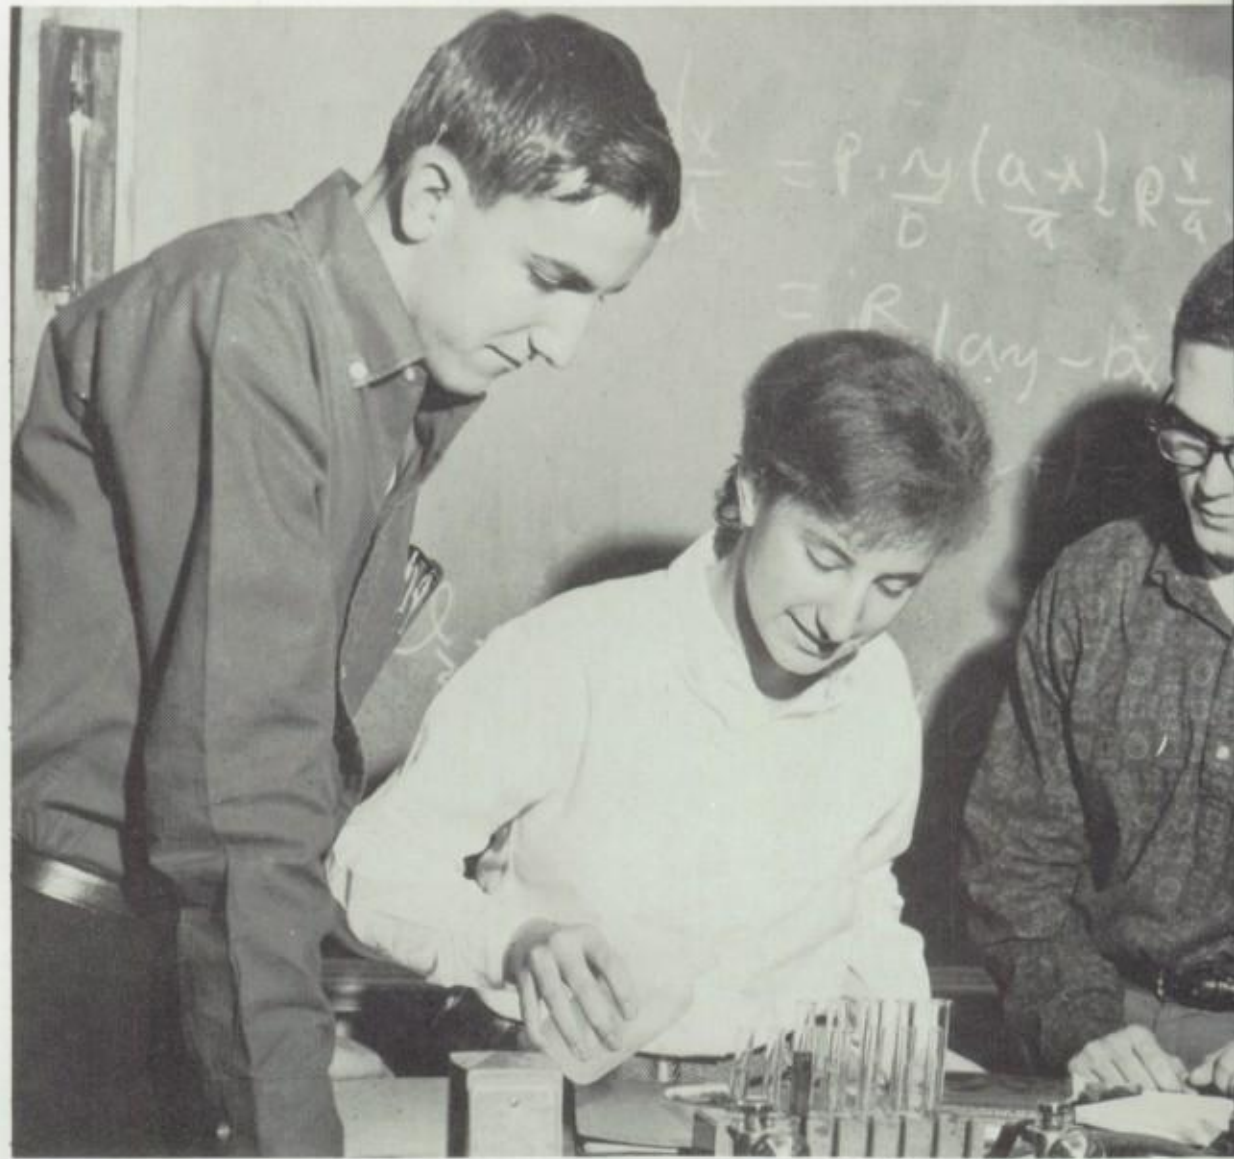

Social and intellectual interests met in the activities of Bridge Club and Chess Club; the former conducted tournaments within ETHS and with other schools, while the latter offered skill development in the intricate maneuvers of the world's oldest game.

The study of cultures new and old occupied members of the Afro-Asian Club.

Lettermen, Trampoline Staff Serve Athletes

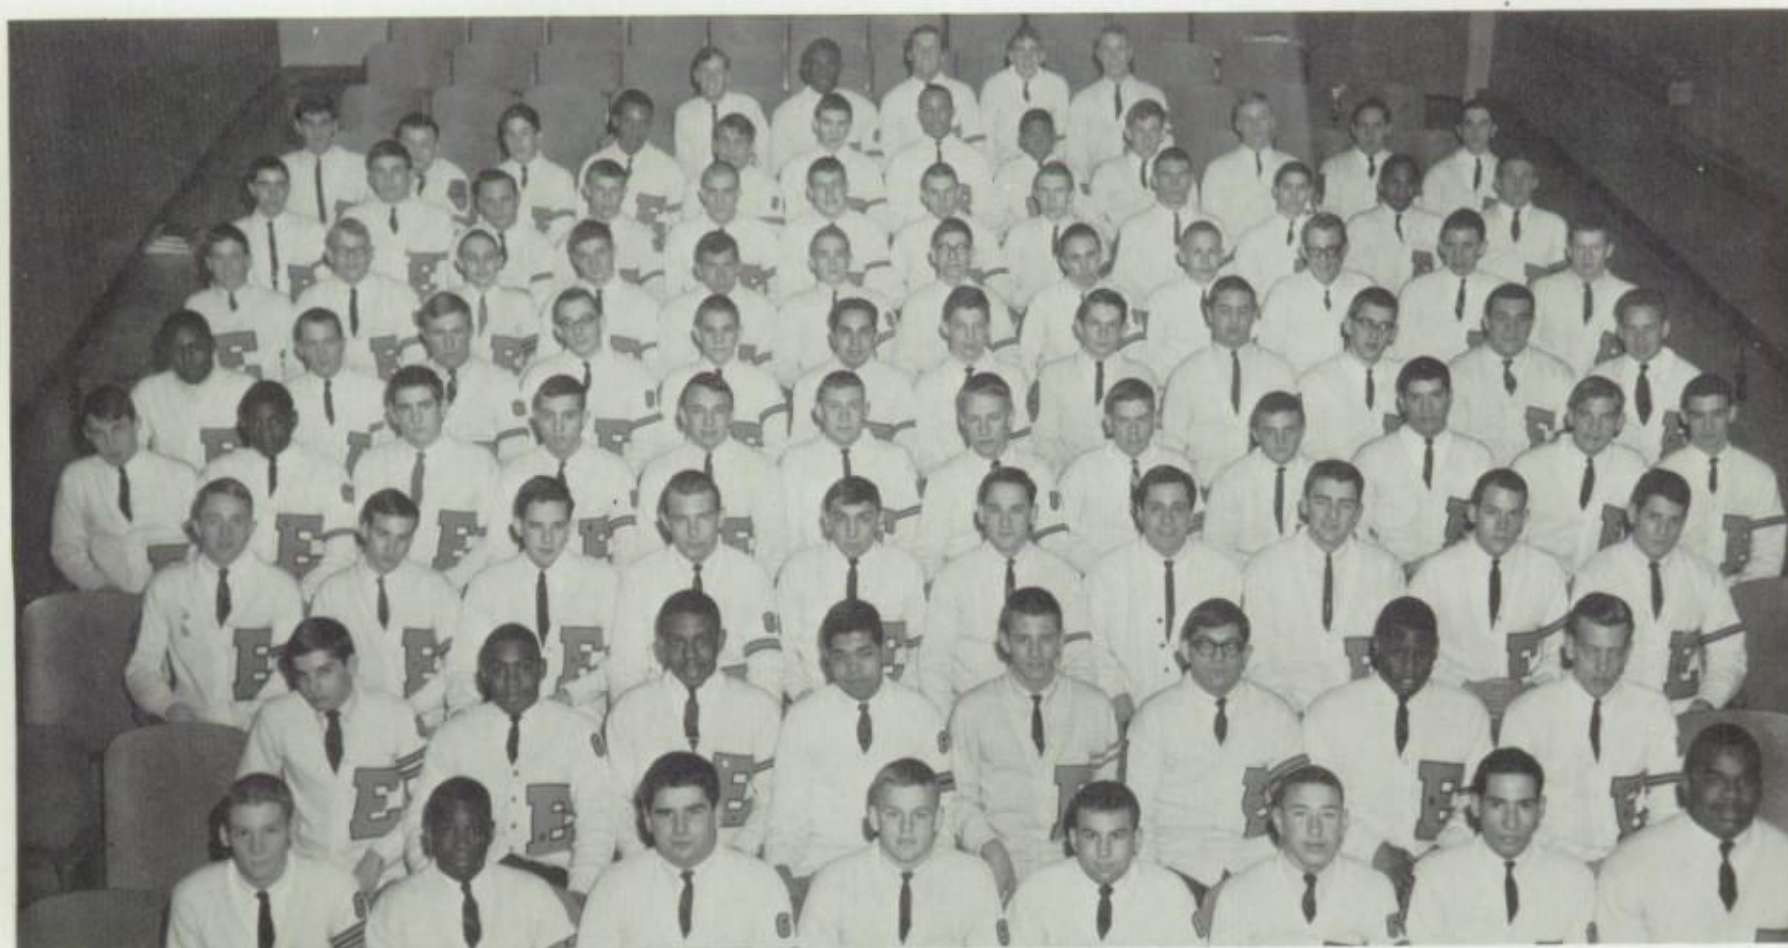

Saturday mornings in the gymnastics gym saw grade school students performing flips, front drops, and front somersaults under the supervision of the members of the Trampoline Staff. Members of the staff, sponsored by Coach Ron Walden, were selected for their exceptional performance as gymnasts in physical education classes or varsity gymnastics.

Lettermens Club, the honor society for letter winners in one or more of the varsity sports, cheered as a group at pep rallies, swim meets, basketball games, and other athletic contests. The club met every Friday during the school year to discuss sports activities at ETHS and to plan such club projects as the knee football game. Other projects included support of the "wear white" campaign through the wearing of the distinctive letter sweaters and a trip to a professional hockey game.

Olympics Add Impetus to Girls Sports

Two girls sprint ahead to tie for first in the 50-yard dash in the fall olympics.

With a flying leap this girl from East Hall places first in the fall olympics broad jump.

How did the future look for fungo-hitting at ETHS?

Very grim, according to the girls sports faculty. Recently there has been an increased interest in the more standard track and field events, such as high jumping and distance running, which threaten to eliminate fungo-hitting and other such ETHS-created activities.

There was not only increased interest in field events; there was increased participation in all aspects of girls sports. As a result of the work of the Girls Sports Board, more use was made of the ETHS sports facilities. The fall olympics, which included the softball and basketball throws, dashes, the running broadjump, and the punt for distance, were created specifically to provide the girls with inspiration, experience, and competition.

Press Bureau, Writers Club Publish

Under the direction of Mrs. Barbara Pannwitt, sponsor, Press Bureau was the link between ETHS and the community. The bureau sent reports of major school events to the "Evanston Review" and other Chicago area papers in order to let the public know what Evanston students were accomplishing.

Writers Club, led by President Linda Grover, aided aspiring student writers. The club, sponsored by Mrs. Marie Claire Davis, sponsored speakers and programs designed to help students better understand and appreciate many types of literature. Informal seminars helped students improve their own writing. An outgrowth of Writers Club, the "Literary Supplement," published the best work of students six times during the year.

The ETHS Photo Service produced pictures for school publications. Photo Service members, chosen for their skill in photography, took pictures for The Evanstonian, the Literary Supplement, the Pilot, The Key, and school brochures. Sponsored by Mr. John Regan, Photo Service helped to promote school activities through photographic coverage of ETHS life.

The Pilot, official handbook of ETHS, provided unknown or hard-to-find information about school policies for Evanston students. The Pilot also explained the purposes, achievements, and format of Central Council; gave a short history of ETHS; listed clubs and organizations and their officers; and presented a calendar of the year's activities.

'Evanstonian' Celebrates 35th Birthday

New techniques, new ideas, and a new style went into operation this year under the leadership of Steve Newberger, editor-in-chief, as The Evanstonian adopted downstyle headlines and a bolder, more horizontal layout.

Twenty-two senior editors assigned stories to their 3 English HJ reporters and sternly refused pleas for extra time. Reporters worked diligently to make their stories both exciting and informative.

November marked a milestone in The Evanstonian's history as the newspaper completed its thirty-fifth year of publication. The Evanstonian was born Nov. 6, 1929, just a week after the stock market crash.

'Key' Strives To Reflect Students

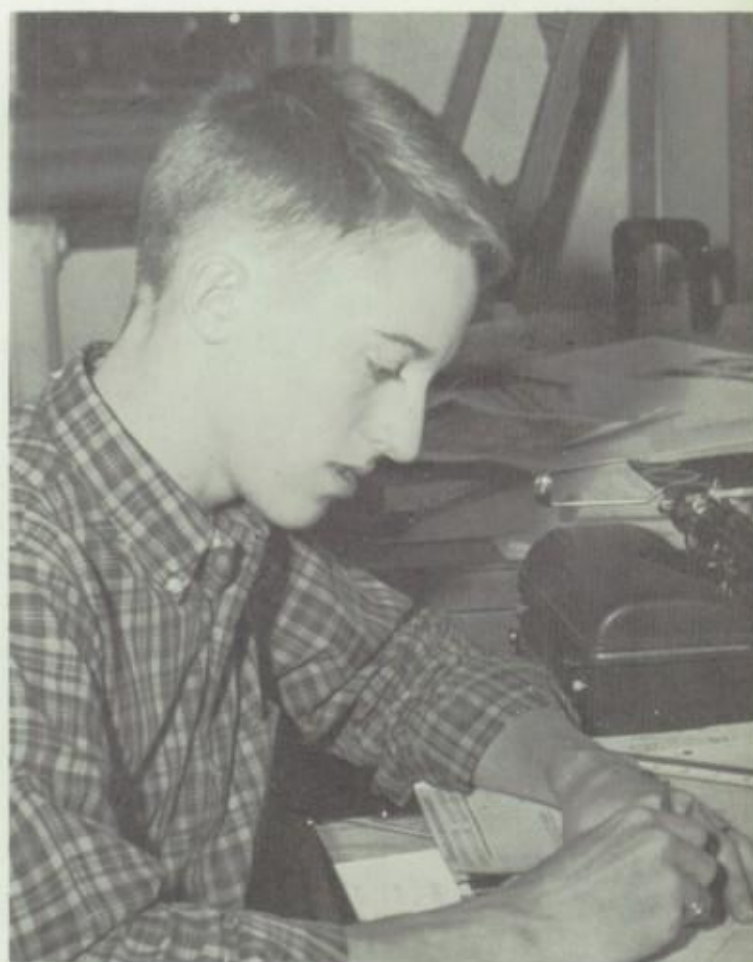

A permanent record of the year, a reflection of the character of the school, a memory book, and a contribution to the public image of the school: the editors and staff of the 1965 Key worked to make their yearbook fulfill its proper functions.

Planning for the 1965 yearbook began a year ago when a brainstorming session produced the book's theme, "Response." Designing layouts, scheduling and taking pictures, and writing copy and cutlines kept the staff busy most of the school year in an effort to meet its three deadlines.

For students with special interest or skill in singing, the Music Department sponsored vocal honors groups. The ETHS Choir, made up of senior girls and sophomore, junior, and senior boys, again met daily as a class. Under the direction of Mr. Richard Rosewall, the choir sang for school assemblies, civic groups, and for Commencement.

Girls Choir, directed by Miss Helen Keith, developed skill in the handling of music for female voices; Madrigals, the sophomore girls honor group led by Mrs. Betty Jacobson, experimented with unusual accompaniments and arrangements.

Civic Groups

Supplementing the Music Department's regular instrumental instruction, groups such as the Dance Band, String Orchestra, Brass Choir, and Woodwind Ensemble provided additional outlet for musical talent.

Members of the Concert Band also played in the Woodwind Ensemble, the Brass Choir, the Dance Band, Marching Band, and many smaller groups. Players of stringed instruments joined the Symphony Orchestra and various quartets and ensembles. Members of both the band and the string orchestra combined in the Symphony Orchestra.

IBM Expedites Registration

ETHS sprawled into two registration days this year as 4,366 students enrolled in the school. In order to start classes promptly on Thursday, two shifts of two halls each arrived Wednesday to register and complete other non-academic business.

Members of the freshman class were oriented the Friday before regular registration. They conferred with their new counselors and homeroom directors, made out their fall schedules, and became generally acquainted with the school building.

IBM relieved the faculty of a dull summer job: several thousand schedules were this year processed by computer. The machine pulled class cards, report cards, and personal information cards, and from them arranged the schedule sheet which was sent to students. Such schedule processing formerly required the efforts of six people working for six weeks. The machine completed the job in one hour.

91.7% Purchase Budget Tickets

Alexis Garfield uses her budget ticket to be admitted to a football game.

91.7% of the ETHS student body purchased Budget Tickets this year as the Budget Ticket staff sought to provide the $25,000 needed for the various student activities.

East Hall scored a near sweep in homeroom rankings, with the seniors leading their class and the entire school with a 97.3% sales record. The East Hall juniors and sophomores also led their classes with totals of 92.3 and 91.2%.

South Hall's freshmen, with sales of 96.4%, led both their hall and their class. The North Hall freshmen and the West Hall sophomores led their halls with 92.3% and 90%.

The more than 4,000 purchasers of a Budget Ticket received a potential activity value of $21.55. This sum included four football games, eight basketball games, six swimming meets, The Evanstonian, the Pilot, and the Key.

'Yamo' Witches Resurrect the Bard

Sue Long works busily at "Shakespeare for President" headquarters.

Ogres, oratory, witches, the World's Fair and "Where There's a Will There's a Way." Robert Moses brought Shakespeare's tomb to the World's Fair. Three definitely weird sisters named Bewitched, Bothered, and Bewildered resurrected the Bard and ran him for president. Their campaign took them from the "Bull Palace" to the halls of ETHS as Yamo '64 satirized subjects from politics to school policy.

Between its plot and the independent blackouts ("The Beatles are coming!"), skits, songs, and dances, the annual all-school talent show offered comment on current news, current rules, and current foolishness. Its plot provided unity yet allowed room for acts including a gymnastics exhibition, a classical pas de deux, and the show-stopping number, a hilarious musical rendition of "The Daily BULLetin."

Rally Sparks Homecoming

Excitement and school spirit filled the halls as students eagerly awaited the Friday afternoon pep rally, the start of Homecoming 1964. The Oct. 16-17 weekend was a kaleidoscope of cheering crowds, colorful floats, and proud players.

The pep rally began with the introduction of the Homecoming Court by Jeff Claiborn. Under the leadership of Mr. William Bunn, the students roared out the cheer song in fine style, demonstrating effectively the energy which became fully evident at Saturday's game. The cheer song was followed by a parade of floats around Memorial Field. The winner of the float contest was North-124's Bulldog-roasting Wildcat, "Some Like It Hot."

While the crowd cheered, Elaine Smudsky was proclaimed queen and was presented with an autographed football by varsity co-captains Ron Harris and Steve Turner. The rally was both climaxed and completed by Coach Murney Lazier's assurance of victory and presentation of the team.

Homecoming celebrations were brought to a close by West Hall Quadrangle's "Harvest Informal," the 1964 Homecoming dance. The atmosphere of victory made the occasion memorable for students and alumni alike.

Variety was the word for the music and entertainment at the dance. Some students frugged to the fast-moving band in the student lounge. Others chose to chuckle at a Peter Sellers movie in the second-floor cafeteria. Still others remained in social hall to dance to the smooth music of a slow dance band.

Halloween was the theme, and enchantment the spirit of "Eek!," the 1964 Girls Club Carnival. The crowded fieldhouse was lined with brightly decorated booths representing 21 school groups, including such varied organizations as Russian Club, Math-Science Club, Musicians Club, Junior Red Cross, and Writers Club.

Students could choose between having their fortunes told by Cosmopolitan Club, shaving the Library Club's balloons sending telegrams via Italian Club, or viewing baby pictures at the Cheerleaders' booth.

Air Force Wild in 'No Time for Sergeants'

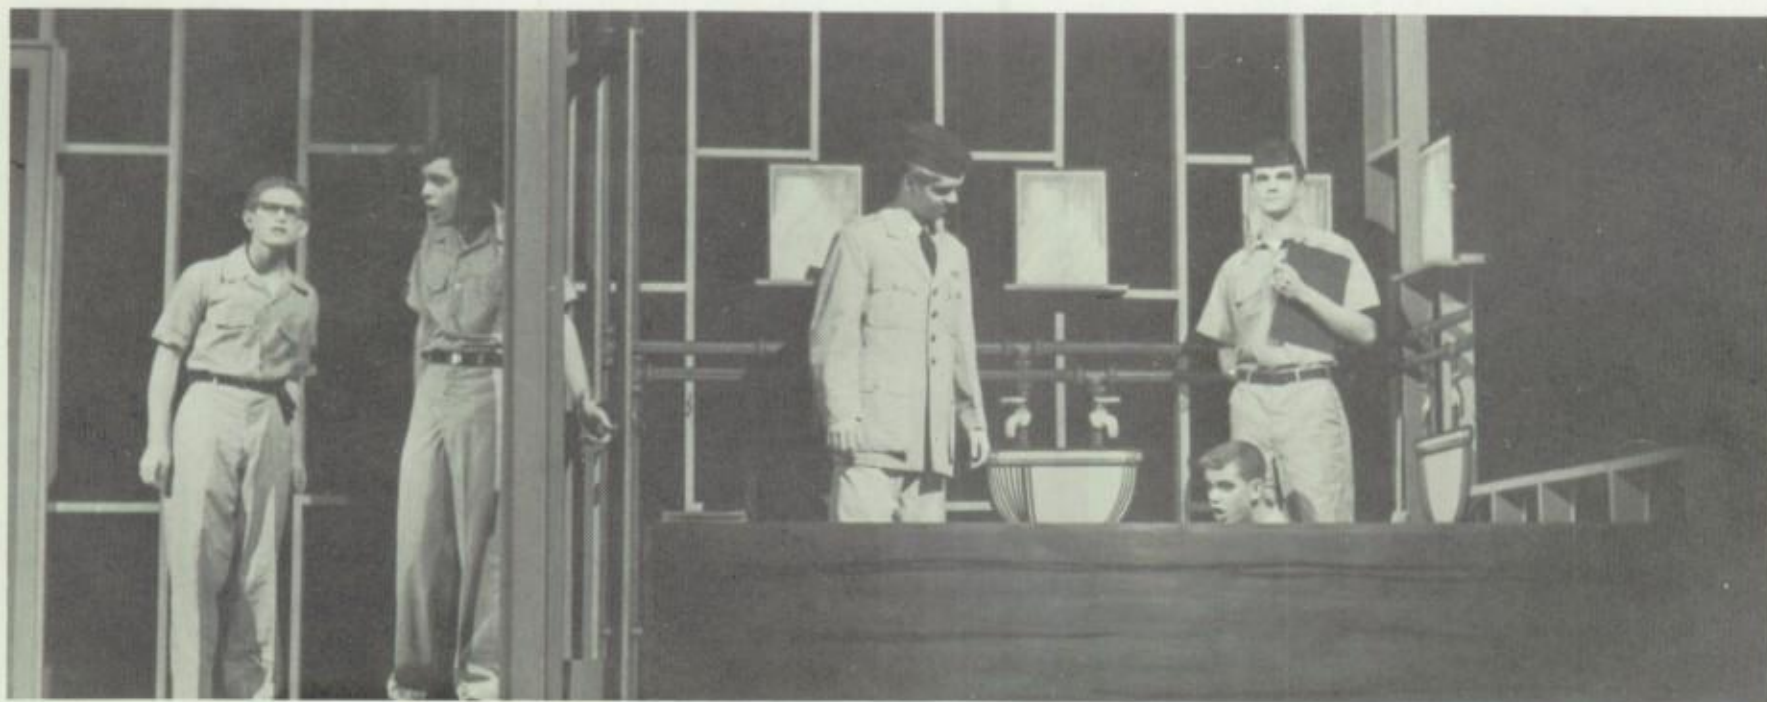

General Rush, played by Max Abrams, awards a medal to Ben Whitledge, played by Mike Babbitt.

A lanky country boy steps to the front of the stage, smiles, and drawls a friendly "Haowdy!" From that point on, the audience was drawn into the story of how Will Stockdale, played by Lorry Goldman, nearly ruins the U.S. Air Force in the fall play, "No Time for Sergeants."

Will is honest, good-natured, and friendly as a pup; he also drives his sergeant to distraction, forces a psychiatrist into a tantrum and totally mystifies his friends and companions. Will's total lack of guile is positively shattering. Nevertheless, despite trial and tribulation, Will and the Air Force at least learn to understand each other.

The ETHS production of "No Time for Sergeants" was uniformly amusing.

Mike Babbitt and Kevin O'Brien played Ben Whitledge; Dan Robinson and Duncan Saunders played Will's barracks sergeant. Other cast members included Ernest Perry as a lieutenant and Greg Meeker as the psychiatrist.

Ben Whitledge and Will Stockdale listen by the door as a captain begins the inspection of the barracks latrine.

Music Sparks Christmas

Christmas at Evanston was sight and smell and sound. It was Christmas greens in homerooms and a tree in the front lobby. It was a hallway lit by firelight and tiny Christmas bulbs. It was the blue and gold of the choir in procession through the halls. It was Santa Claus and La Buffana and the Three Kings.

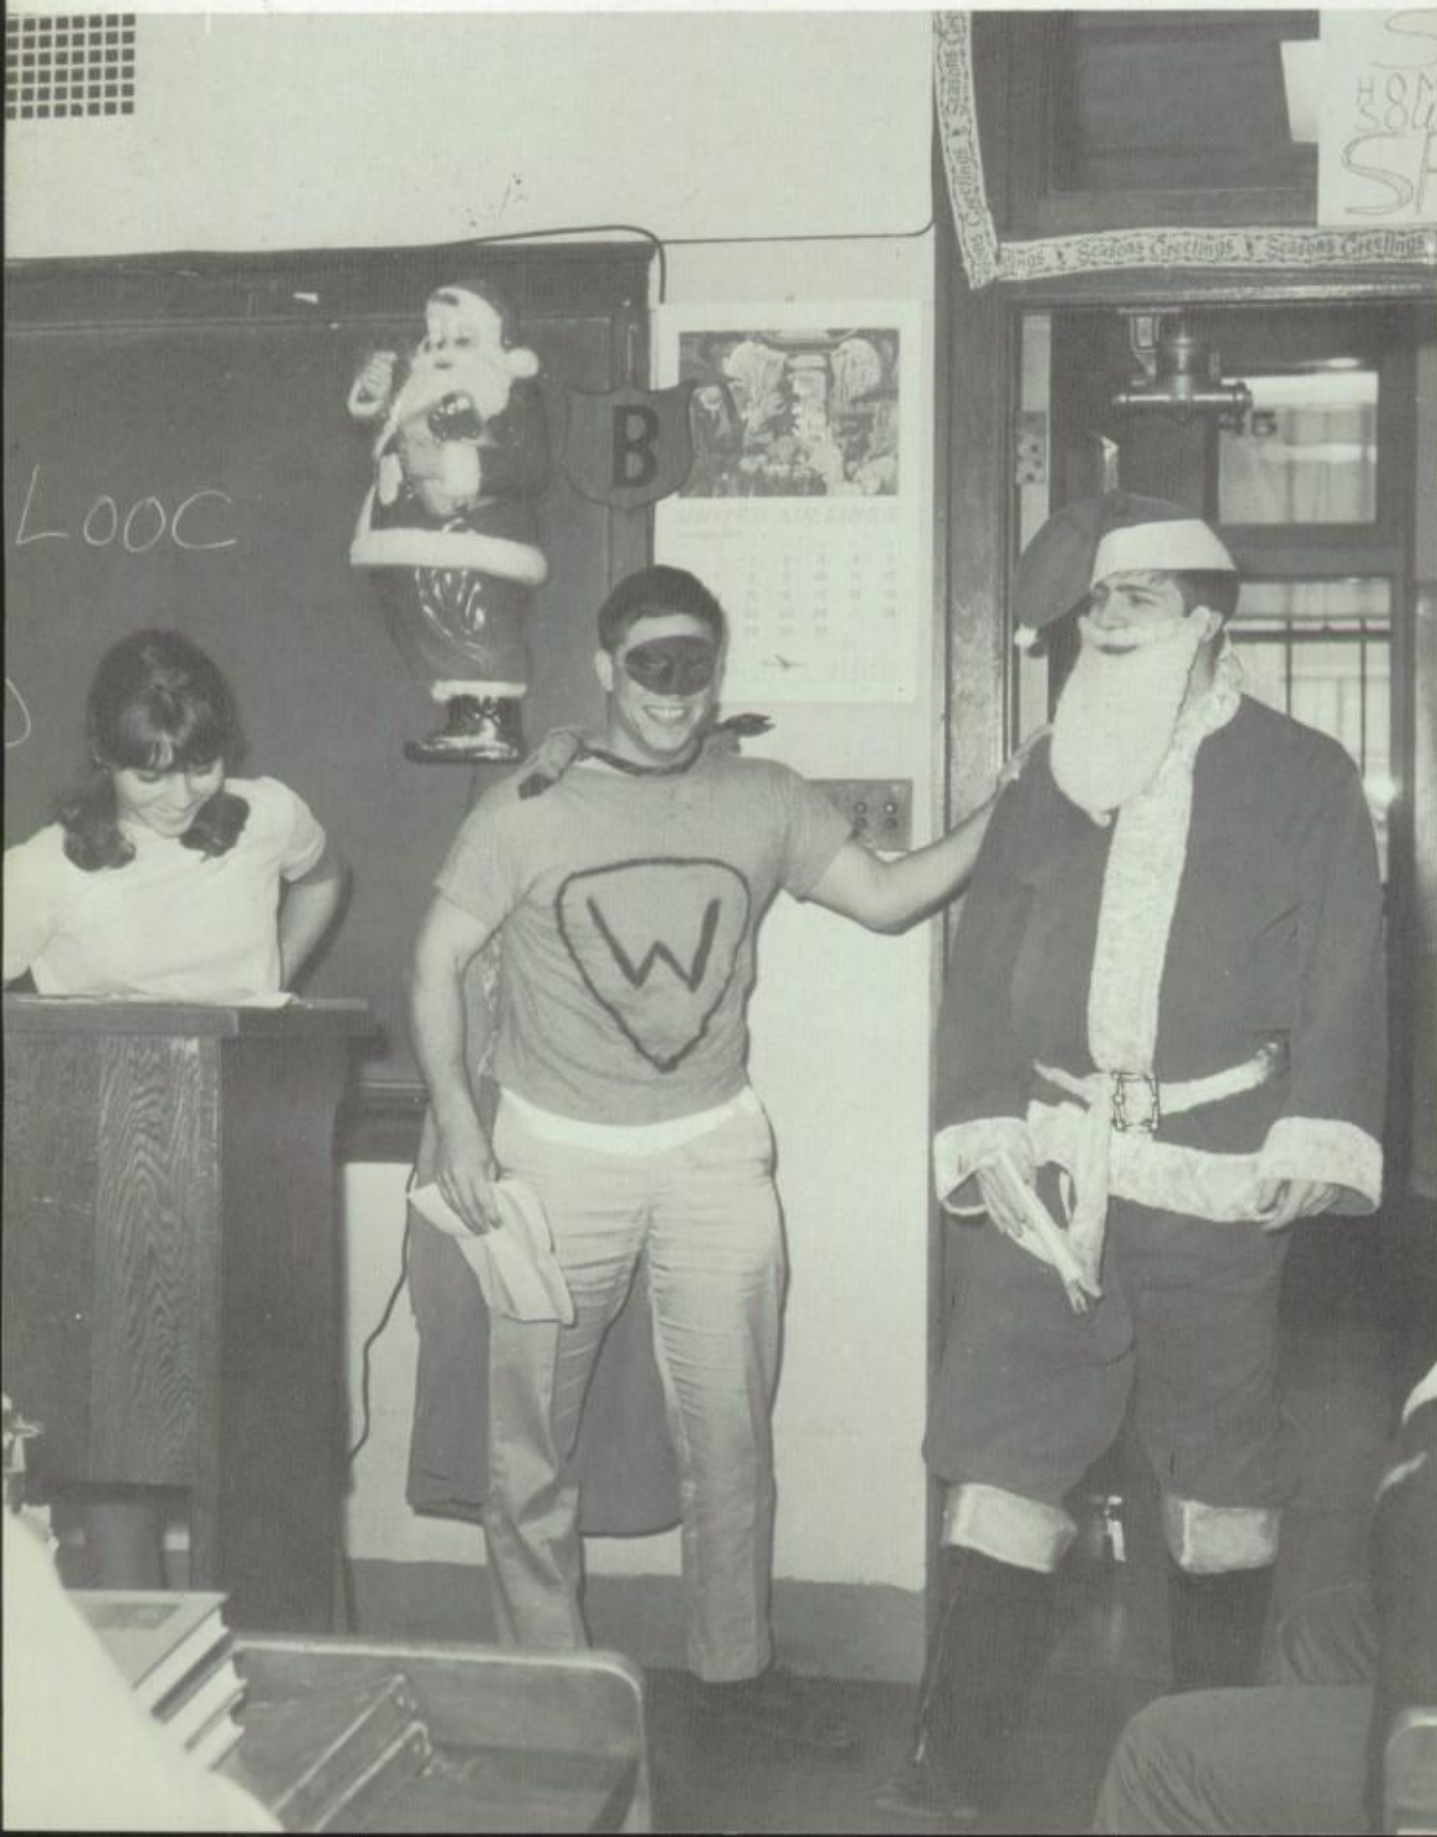

Christmas was the green and spicy smell of pine. It was a sweet whiff of the exotic from a Christmas party.

Performing Arts Festival Initiates New Tradition

The birth of a new tradition in the arts occupied ETHS students and teachers in February as the Music, Speech Arts, and Girls Physical Education Departments combined forces to present the first annual Festival of Performing Arts. Songs, dances, and dramas, many student-created, were part of the festival, held Feb. 8-9.

The ETHS Choir sang "London Street Cries," contrasting them with the street cries from "Porgy and Bess." The choir also performed sections of Bruckner's Mass in E Minor, accompanied by a 16-piece ensemble. Dances were provided by junior and senior Esande, who gave rhythmic interpretations of "Conquest of the Computer" and the motions of "One-Celled Animals."

Studio Theatre Offers Five Productions

This year the Speech Arts Department set itself a minimum of three Studio Theatre productions--and then proceeded to outdo itself with five. The opening production, directed by Mrs. Doris Rudy, included scenes of family life from "I Remember Mama," "Riders to the Sea," "Time Out for Ginger," and "Raisin in the Sun."

The next production, directed by Mrs. Janet Bauer, was "Time of Your Life," a study of the stages in human life. The third production, under Mr. William Ditton's direction, consisted of scenes from several controversial plays, including "Death of a Salesman," "Auntie Mame," "The Glass Menagerie," "The Women," and "A Taste of Honey."

Eugene Ionesco's one-act play "Jack or the Submission," an example of the theatre of the absurd, was directed in March by Mr. Wallace Smith. The final studio theatre production was given in May.

EYC Scrutinizes Basic Beliefs, Ideals

With provocative arguments and stimulating discussions, the Evanston Youth Conference, led by Bruce Unterman, helped students to scrutinize their basic beliefs, aims, and ideals. Although not directly connected with religion, the conference dealt with personal philosophy and thus with personal faith.

Ethics and personal conscience were the principal discussion topics this year, weighing established rules of conduct against individual determination of behavior. After an introductory worship service conference participants split into small debate sessions.

An EYC highlight was a jazz worship service which exemplified the spirit and aims of the group: to reconcile the words of traditional philosophy with the rhythms of modern life.

The EYC Board plans its spring conference program in a discussion led by Bruce Unterman.

Girls' Tennis Team Wins Third Championship

The interscholastic girls tennis team, sponsored by Mrs. Barbara Rubin, this year won its third championship in three years of competition.

The 12 team members, chosen by tryouts last spring, successfully competed against similar teams from Maine East, Maine West, Maine South, Glenbrook North, and Barrington. The girls tennis league, whose primary purpose was to provide an opportunity for skilled competition, also effected friendly contact between girls from the various schools.

Poverty and Opulence Contrast in 'My Fair Lady'

The lights dimmed; the orchestra struck the overture; and two ragged Cockneys stalked on stage to remove the silver letters from a lavender chiffon curtain. This contrast of poverty and opulence welcomed the audience to "My Fair Lady," the Lerner-Loewe musical based on George Bernard Shaw's story of the transformation of Eliza Doolittle from flower girl into lady.

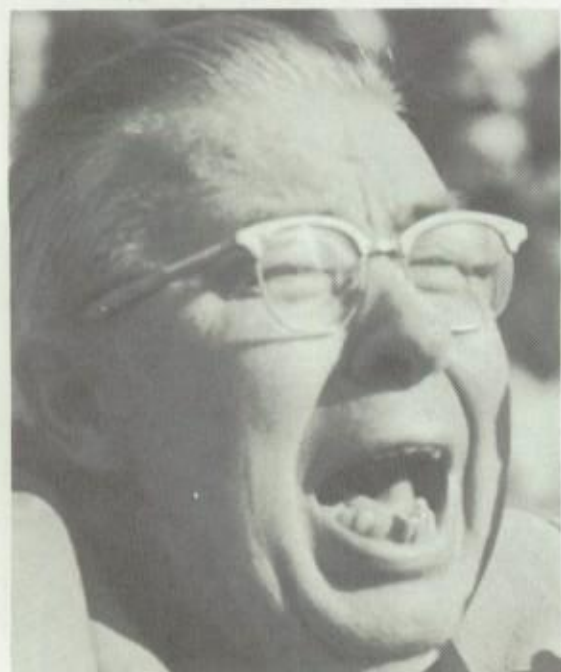

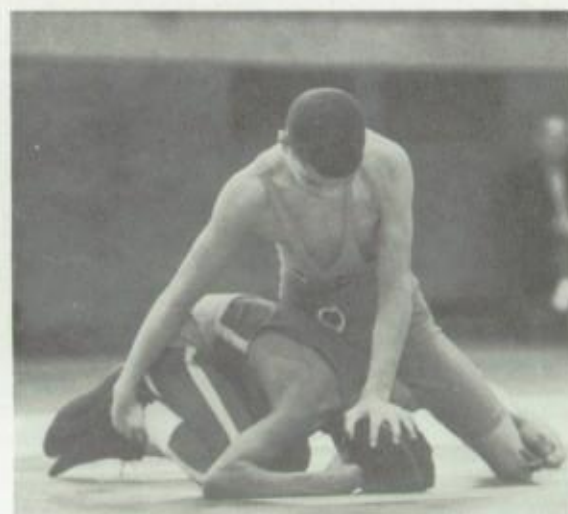

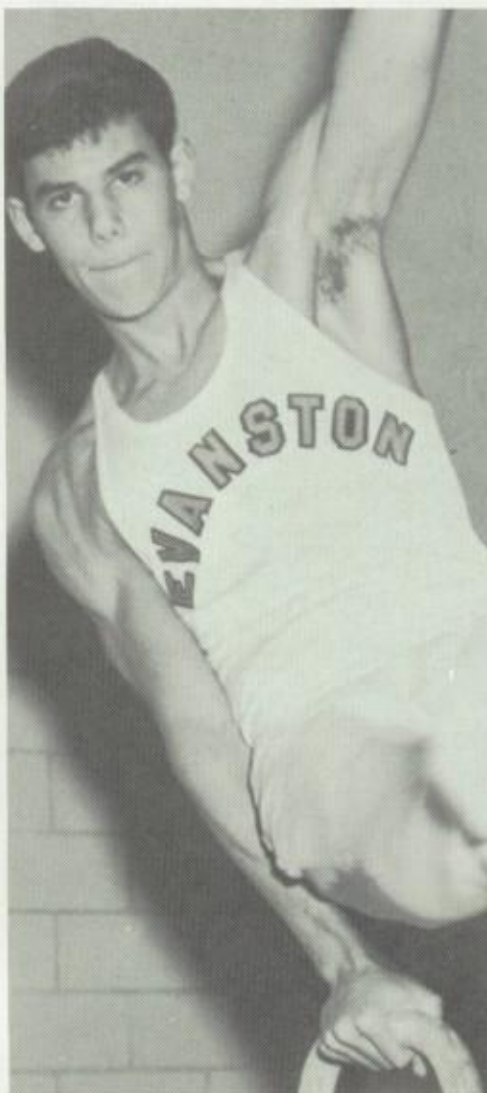

The ETHS musical March 12-13, 19-20 was directed by Mr. Malcolm Mosing. Dressed in costumes executed by Mr. Frank Tresise and Sanford Slepak and surrounded by Mr. Robert Proper's scenery in both complex and simple modes, "My Fair Lady" players succeeded in portraying the squalor and splendor of Edwardian England.

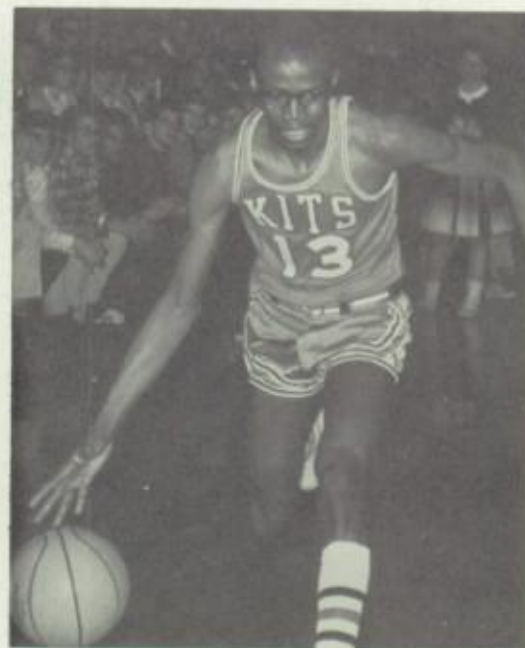

Played by Sue Long and Becky Whitehouse, Eliza was both charming and natural; particularly real were her scenes with Freddy, played by Scott Johnston and Jim Vey. The bad manners and meticulous pronunciation of Henry Higgins were duplicated by Lorry Goldman and Bill Quateman, complemented by the Col. Pickering of Jeff Emrich.

A lively supporting cast and chorus, dancers choreographed by Mr. Gus Giordano, and the ETHS orchestra directed by Mr. Robert Werner contributed to the success of "My Fair Lady," for the uniqueness of the production lay not only in its staging techniques but in the ability and enthusiasm of everyone involved.

Early Loss

Whether it was John Kincaid wildly scrambling to shake off red-doggers, Ron Harris breaking through the line for a touchdown run, or Bill Majewski making mince-meat out of an opposing fullback, the Wildkits battled to eventually tie Highland Park for Suburban League football supremacy.

Unlike the typical Evanston eleven that depends on grinding out four or five yards at a time the 1964 Wildkits played a wide-open brand of football that attracted fans and won games.

The Kits dropped their league opener to Highland Park in a drenching rain but never lost again as they catapulted from the cellar to a first place tie.

The action was concentrated in the season's final three weeks. Tied with New Trier for second place, Evanston frustrated Green Wave revenge efforts as quarterback John Kincaid stole the show.

Junior tackle Mike Phillips leaves his feet to intercept a New Trier pass. This play all but clinched the game for Evanston, as the Kits led 14-13 with minutes remaining. New Trier was moving when the interception killed the drive and enabled the Kits to march for an insurance touchdown.

League

Hard work and the will to win brought the Kit cross country fifth place in the state meet and a Suburban League championship in 1964.

The well-balanced squad was paced by seniors Stan Kozubek and Jim Stinchcomb; other key runners included juniors Jasper Johnson and John Schulz and sophomore Fred Wharton.

The conference season was climaxed by the Kits' first-place finish in the Suburban League meet. Having edged out Proviso East 27-28 and losing to New Trier, the Kits entered the meet tied with both these teams.

After second and fourth place finishes by Kozubek and Stinchcomb enabled the Kits to win the meet, it was clear sailing to the championship.

The harriers' triumphs continued with the district meet as the entire team qualified for the state championship by placing second in the district.

Dressed in warm sweatsuits, both cross country squads execute calisthenics commanded by Coach David Stern; distance running was only part of the training necessary to prepare for meets.

Undefeated Soccer Team Best in State

During the sixth season of inter-school soccer competition at Evanston, Coach Ken McGonagle's squad established new records, causing an increase in game attendance and the general growth of interest in soccer. The team won ten games, went undefeated, scored a total of 27 goals while limiting its opponents to only two, and were heralded as state champions.

In addition to a commendable team performance, Evanston's soccer squad produced many individual stars. Jim Weinstein, Monroe Walker, Jim Brown, Bob Hackman, and Alphonso Herrera were named to the all-state team. Monroe Walker was the high scorer with eight goals, Bob Hackman scored seven, and Jim Weinstein as goalie led the tight defense.

Bob Hackman heads the ball in a training routine as Ralph Corey, Jerry Terhune, and Rod Lindenberger await their turn. The perfection of this maneuver enhanced the team's ball control ability.

Waukegan; Lose to HP

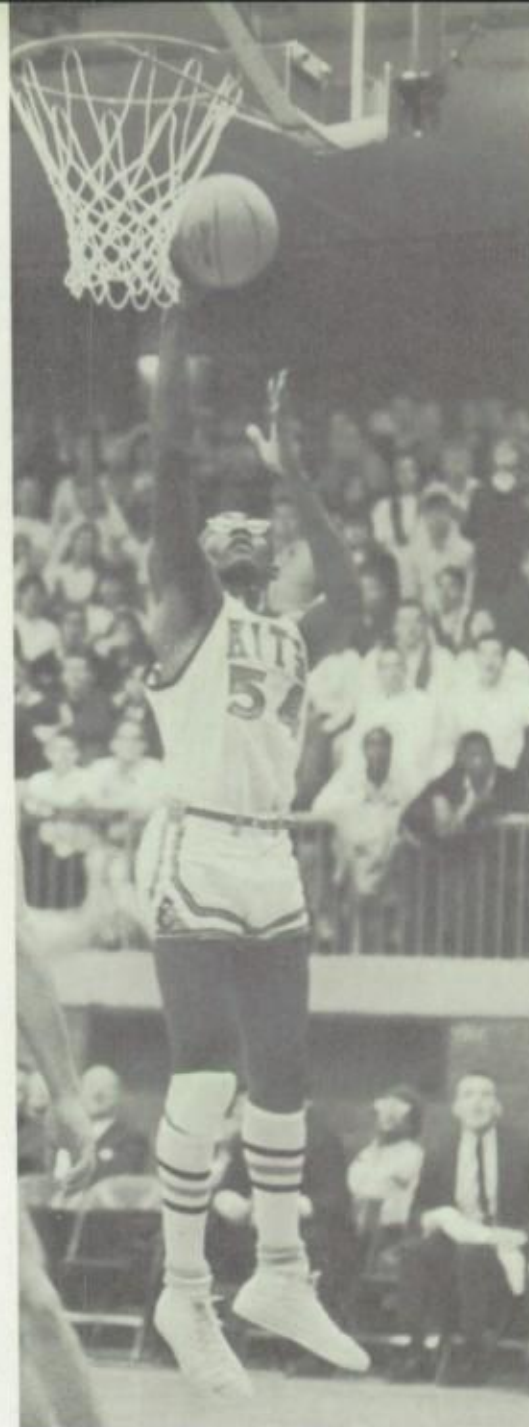

The varsity cagers did not win as many games as last year's state championship contenders, but their season was just as exciting. Five of Evanston's games were decided by margins of five points or less, and even the experts couldn't predict the outcome of most contests.

Beginning the year with a frustrating three-point loss to Niles West, the Kits won three of their next four games before they met low-rated Niles East. Despite the heavy odds favoring Evanston, it took outside shooting in the fading minutes to edge the Trojans 72-69.

Only two weeks later, against tough competition in the Holiday Tournament, the Wildkits scared Alton in a two-point loss and then went on to beat two other downstate teams.

Just as it seemed that the hoopsters had hopes for an improved season it took a last-second 20-foot jump shot by Ralph Corey to defeat cellar-dwelling Oak Park. Following this with lop-sided losses to New Trier and Proviso East, Evanston seemed to be doomed for second division when once again it hit a hot streak. The team swished off a string of five wins that included upset victories over Morton and Waukegan, and Evanston again battled for league supremacy.

Losses to league leaders Proviso and New Trier, however, along with squad injuries, placed Evanston at the .500 mark in Suburban League competition at the end of the season, and 13-11 overall.

Six-foot four-inch center Mike Wynn scores two points for Evanston on an open layup.

Wildkits Massacre

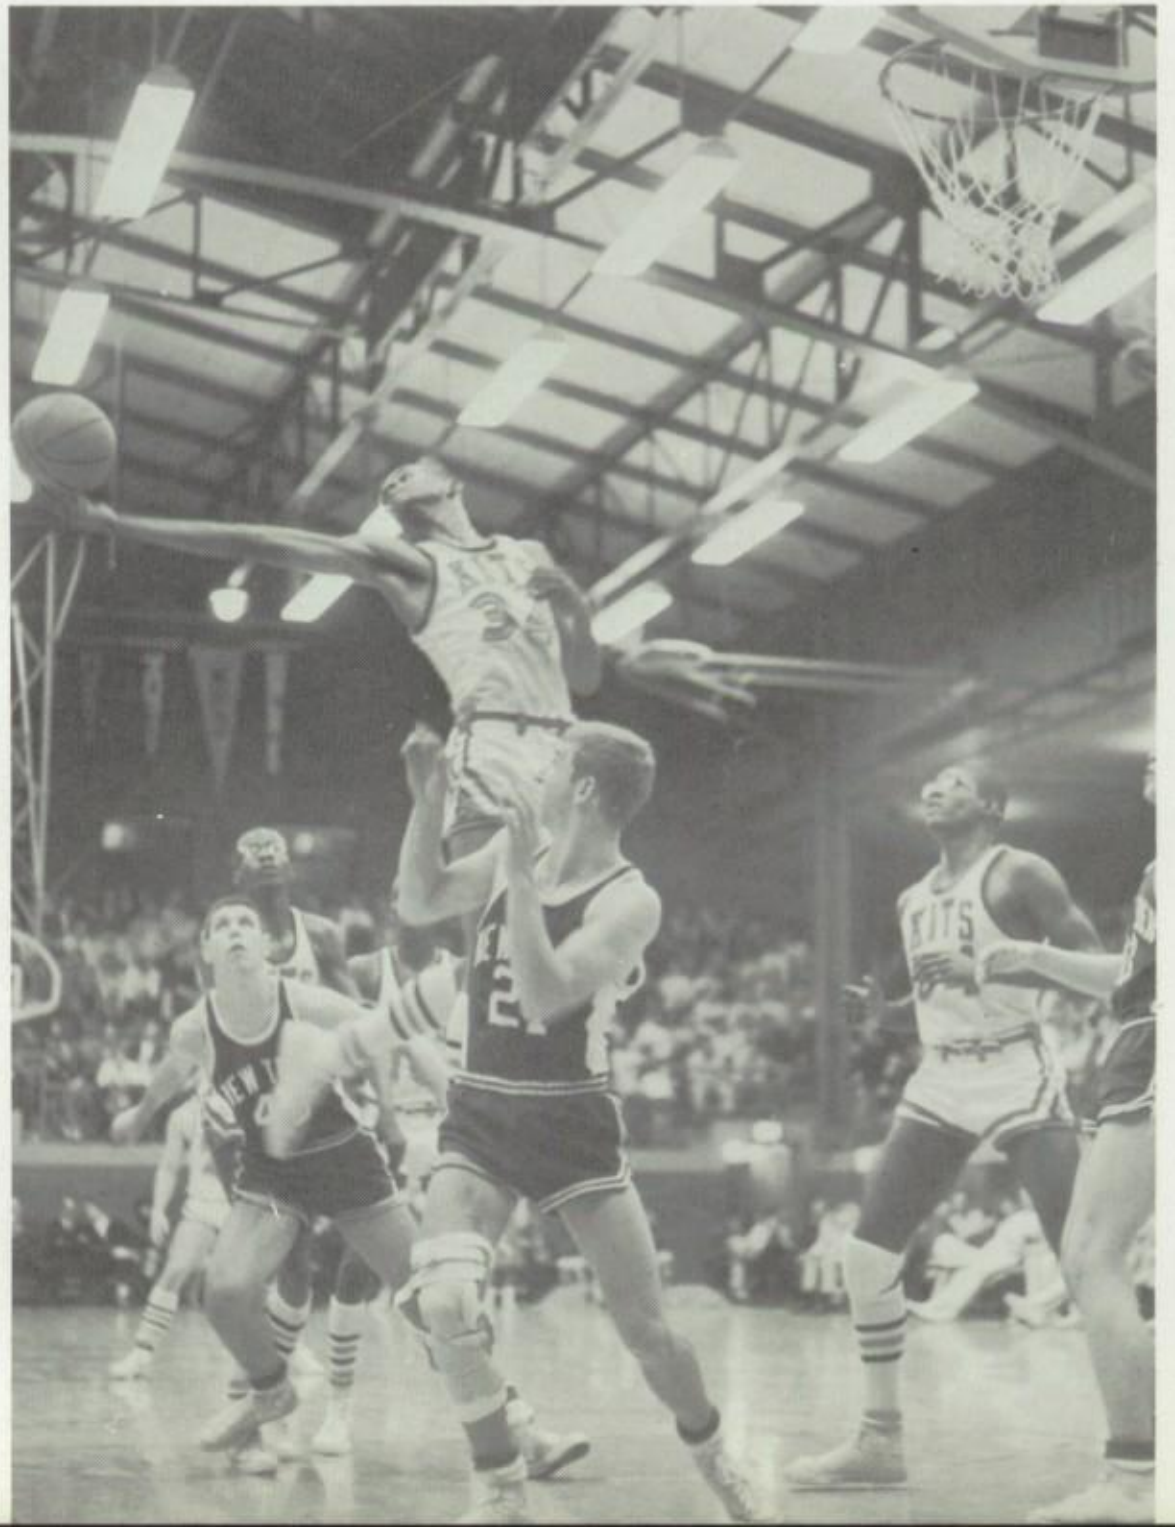

Mike Wynn watches through the fingers of Niles East center Gil Ravelette as his shot heads for the hoop.

Coach Jack Burmaster and the Evanston bench watch intently as the Wildkits pull an upset over highly ranked Waukegan.

Roy Houston's rebounding was a Wildkit strength as the six-foot two-inch junior was one of the toughest forwards on the boards. Above, he pulls down a bound in a close victory over Niles East; at right he clears the defensive board in the New Trier game as Les Grant awaits the outlet pass.

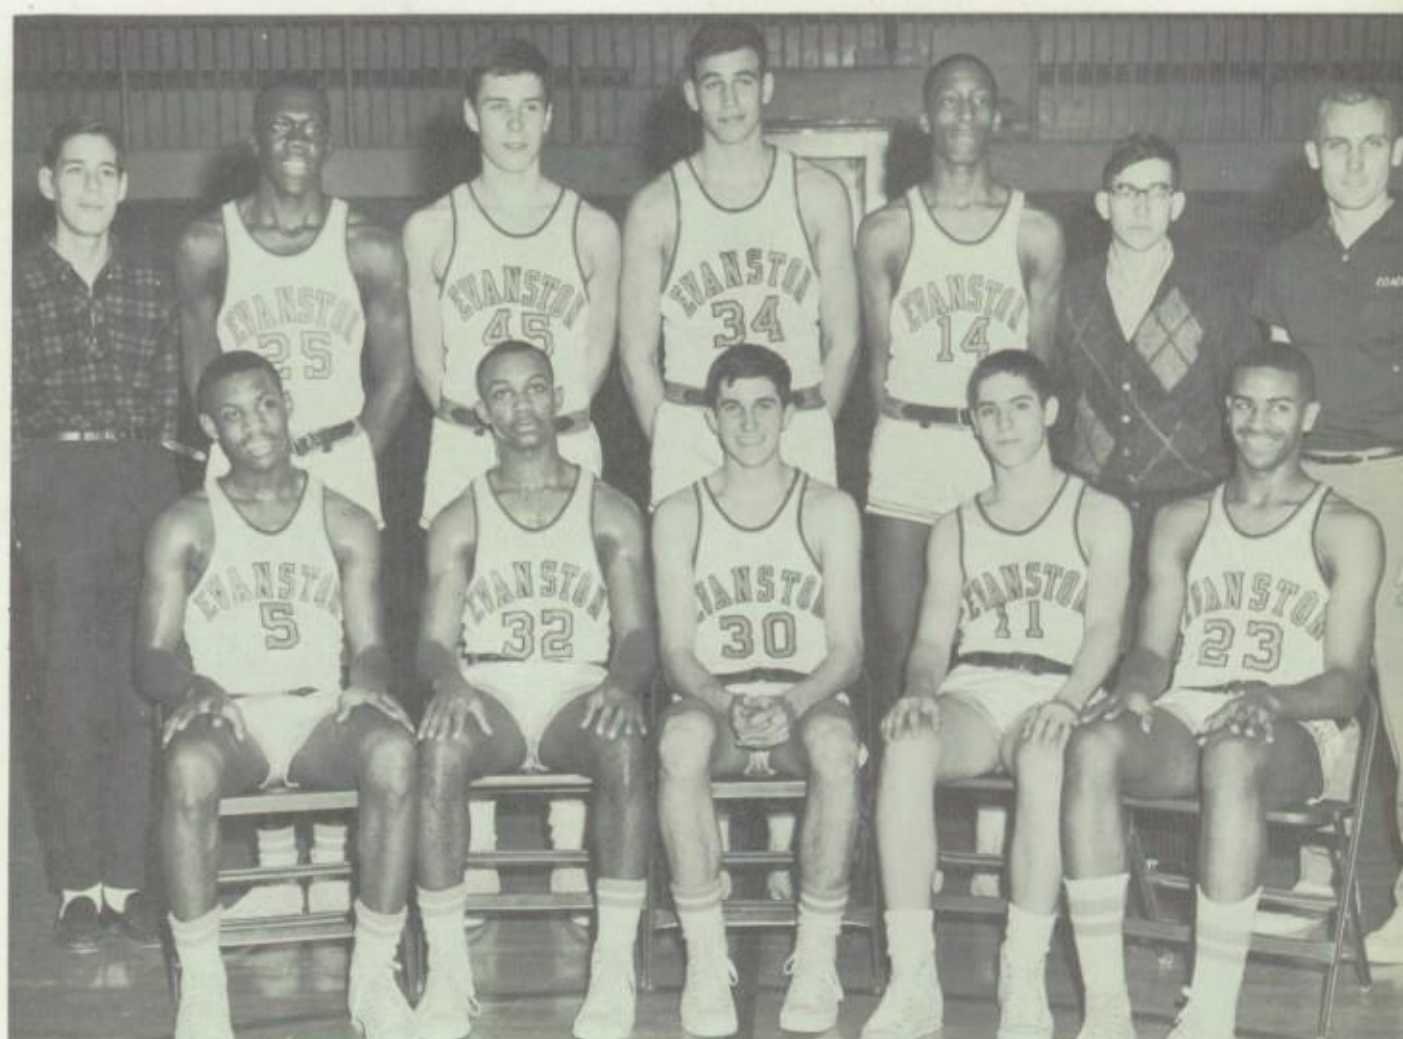

Glenbrook, Fall to Niles West in Regional

The Evanston basketball team ended the '64-'65 season just where it started. Between the opening day loss to Niles West and the day the same team dumped them from regional competition on the same court, the Wildkits were alternately brilliant and mediocre.

On some days the Kits were able to shock the state's elite, such as the 25-point basting of Morton; on others, they were taken down to the wire by Oak Park and Niles East, last-place partners of the Suburban League. When the dust finally settled, the Kits found themselves on the winning side of the scorebook, with 13 victories and 11 losses.

Captain Mike Wynn, six-foot four-inch center, won many games with his defense and rebounding, while forward Les Grant made the All-Suburban team. Les and his brother Don gave the Kits a tough zone press defense. Tom Weingartner, a hard-driving forward, alternated with Roy Houston on the front line. Houston, with his deadly pivot shot, came into his own as a center after a broken foot ended Wynn's season prematurely.

The sophomore team equalled the varsity's record of 7-7 and finished 11-7 overall. The junior varsity achieved an 11-6 record, while both freshman teams also had winning seasons.

Gymnasts Suburban

For the second time in three years Evanston's gymnastics team took the Illinois state championship under the leadership of Coach Ron Walden. The gymnasts edged their Suburban League partners, Proviso East, by capturing first and second in the trampoline event, second on the side horse, and third in the all-around division. The pacesetters were Bill Rondinella, Rich Crim, Craig Sulak, and Ernest McDonald.

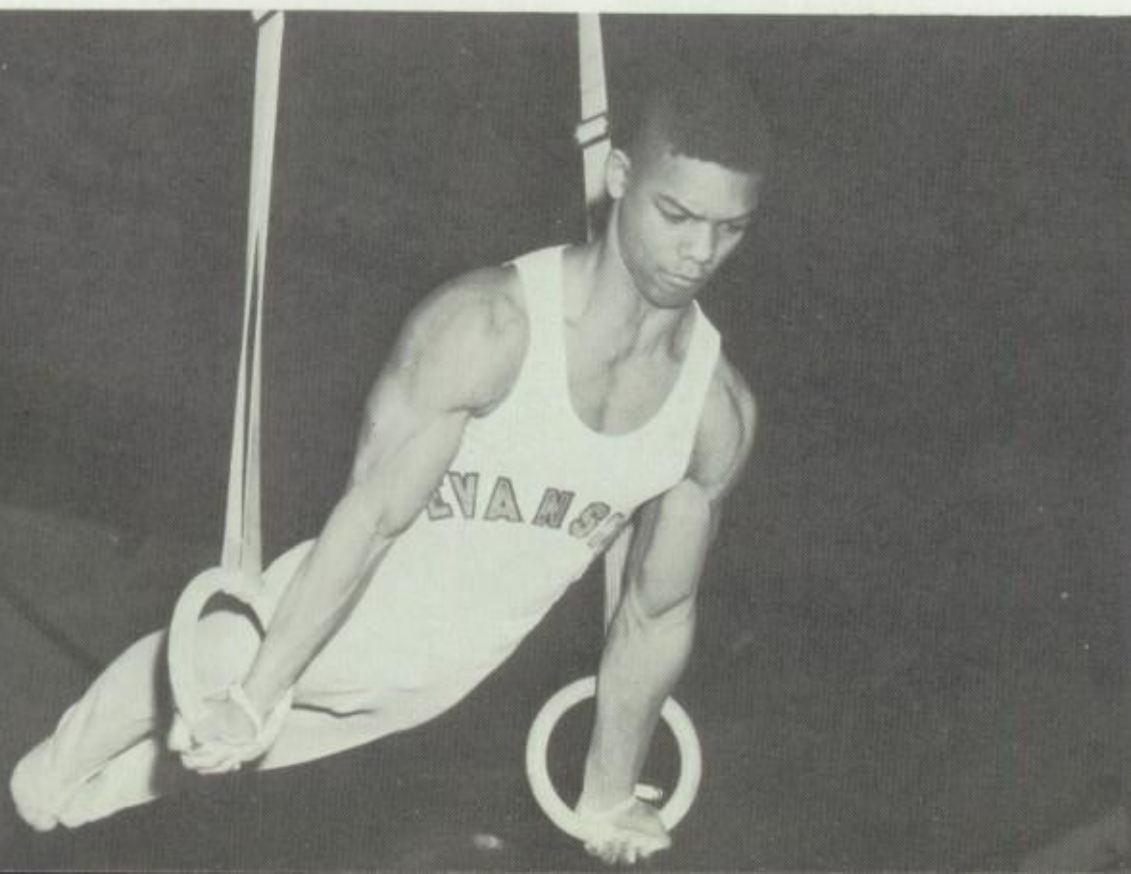

Another major Wildkit accomplishment was the first place finish at the Evanston Invitational. Previous ETHS teams have won state and SL titles, but this was the first year that the Kits were victorious in their own invitational.

Although Mike Devorkin, Doug Brittain, and Metin Cambel did not place in the state meet, they were instrumental in Evanston's Suburban League and district victories.

The sophomores displayed much the same success as the varsity, winning meet after meet and finishing the season with a 12-1 record. The freshman team also showed promise in a winning season.

All-around performer and leading scorer Buzz McDonald strains as he performs his ring routine. McDonald was consistently on top on the high bar and placed high on the side horse and parallel bars as well as the rings.

in League; Two Go Downstate

After a promising start which included six straight victories and a second place finish in the Waukegan Tourney, the Evanston wrestlers suffered successive midseason losses to North Chicago and New Trier. Although Coach Elias George's matmen tried desperately to overcome these setbacks, a 20-19 loss to Waukegan pushed the Kits out of Suburban League contention.

Soundly beating a strong Proviso East team, the varsity wrestlers needed a victory over the state champion Waukegan Bulldogs to tie for the Suburban League crown. ETHS trailed with two matches remaining when 180-lb. Mike Phillips pinned his opponent, but Evanston failed to gain enough points in the final match and lost the meet.

Heavyweight Mickey Goldman and 138-lb. Newton Champion were Evanston's representatives to the state championships in Champaign, while Errol Wilson and Miller Riley were also consistent winners for ETHS.

Miller Riley gains three points by dragging his foe to the mat.

Swimmers Rank Second

Paced by Bill Swisher, Chuck Hollins, and Bruce Getz, the varsity swimming team raced to nine victories but could not overcome New Trier and finished second in the Suburban League this year. Placing behind New Trier and Hinsdale in the Rockford Relays, the Kits had their chance for revenge in their home pool during the state meet.

With more qualifying swimmers than any other school and two first-place finishes by Swisher, Evanston beat out Hinsdale but lost narrowly to New Trier and ended its season as state runner-up.

For the second year in a row the sophomores paralleled the varsity by downing all opponents except New Trier and Hinsdale. The sophomore squad, coupled with returning juniors Fred Southward, Dave Darling, and Dean Satterthwaite, should provide a strong nucleus for next year's team.

ETHS Suburban League Indoor Track Champs

After repeatedly beating their opponents with record-breaking efforts, the Evanston indoor track team capped the season by winning the Suburban League meet. The squad then moved outdoors where it opened against Oak Park, the team that the Kits edged out for the SL indoor crown.

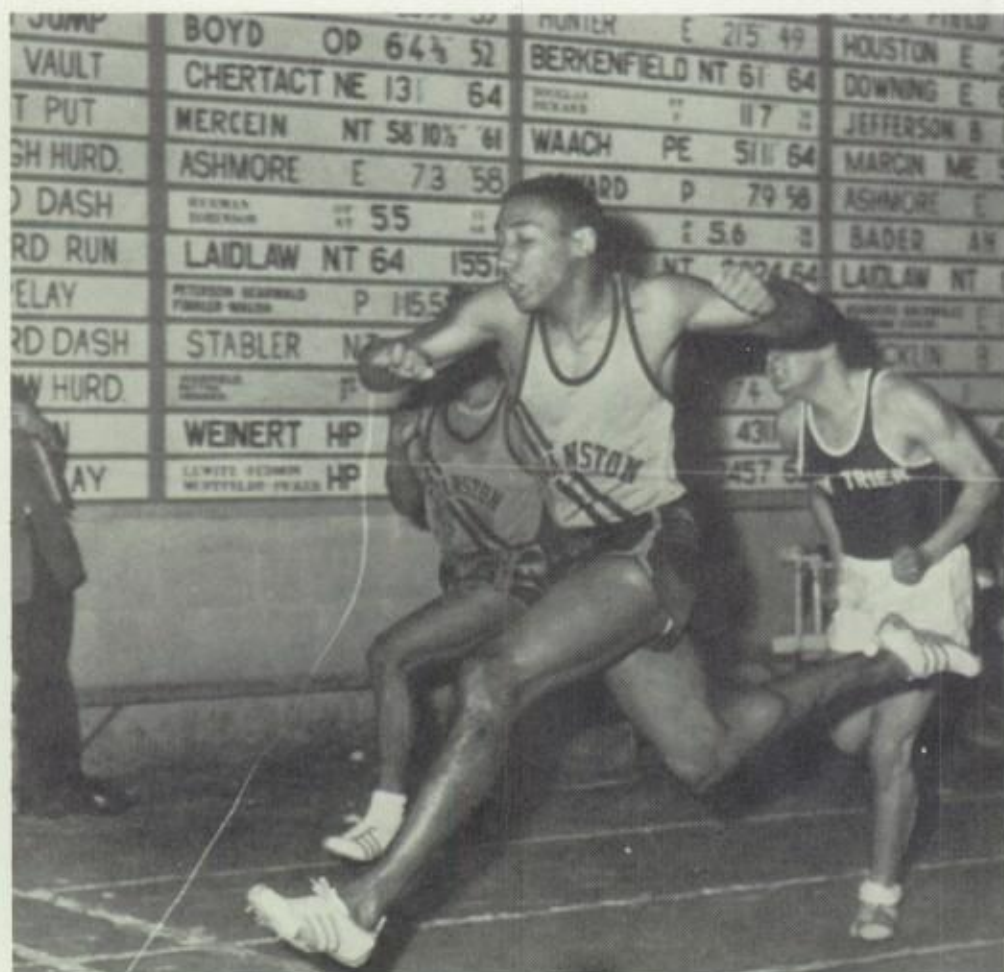

ETHS was paced by Jesse Sibert, Randy Richard, Bruce Burton, and Roy Houston, who set a national interscholastic broad jump record with his 23'11 1/2" leap against New Trier. Other outstanding team members were Marv Bankston, Stan Kozubek, Rich Lewis, Jim Stinchcomb, and Joe Martin.

Class of '65 Retraces Senior Year

Seniors enjoy the privilege of viewing assemblies from the ground floor of Beardsley Gym.

Poetry analysis and analysis of our lives. Chemical reactions and emotional ones. Four years suddenly converged upon a single point in June. We were high school seniors for the first and last time.

We compared our senior photos with the glossy toothpaste smiles on our combination ID and library cards. We filled out college applications and waited apprehensively for a letter from Transylvania U.

We tied with Highland Park for the Suburban League football crown and captured the state title in soccer. We cheered basketball and gymnastics, baseball and swimming, wondering if the teams could carry on without us.

We applauded Shakespeare in Yamo. We skate-boarded and discothequed to the Beatles. "No Time for Sergeants" laughed us into the realization that the draft was alarmingly near.

It seemed that our last year would never be over, and then it was.

Seniors Plan for College or Careers

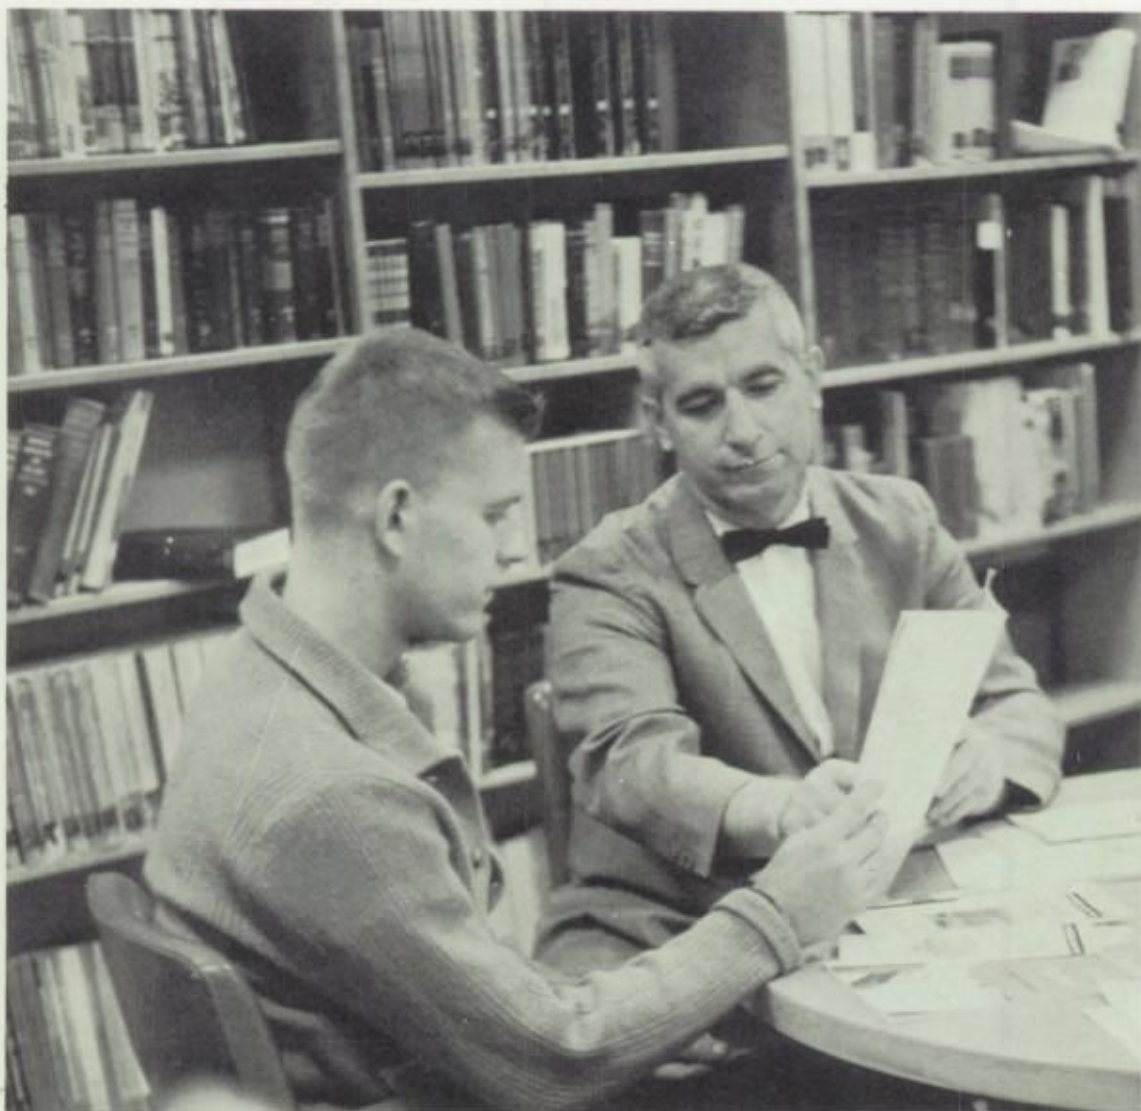

Miss Marlene Forland counsels Donna Lewis in her post-graduation plans.

Although reaching the senior year sometimes seemed the ultimate achievement of an academic career, the high school guidance program aimed at making it a successful transition period for the college- or work-bound student.

The college reference room, with shelves of college catalogs and yearbooks, offered the student a chance to explore college opportunities independently. The room also stored technical school catalogs and occupational pamphlets for the use of the working student.

Counselors and principals discussed testing, class rank, applications, educational needs, and parental responsibility with senior families at senior parent meetings. After the student had reached a decision, a processing service provided by the main office sent the application, along with the counselor's comments and the student's transcripts, directly to the desired school.

Donald Neighbor examines occupational pamphlets with guidance from teacher Mr. Frank Bace.

The NROTC program is explained by Lt. S. P. Thompson.
